ALDERMEN AND POLICE CASES.

Patrolman Lowry awakened a man on lower Lackawanna avenue yesterday morning at 4.39 o'clock and advised the fellow, who was intoxicated, to start for home. The suggestion of the patroiman was returned by several quick blows So terrific were they that the officer was compelled to use his club in defense. Af-ter a hard tussle the ingrate was landed in the police station. As a hearing later he gave his name as Jacob Betzel. Alderman Kasson, who presided at police court, committed him to jail in default

Daniel O'Donnell, of Capouse avenue, was arrested yesterday on warrants is-sued by Alderman Kasson on the charge of assault and battery and threatening to kill. Tillie O'Donnell, his wife, was the prosecutor. He was arraigned for hearing last evening at 5 o'clock. Mrs. O'Don. neil testified that it is not an infre-quent happening for her husband to discolor her eyes and bruise her face. She demanded that O'Donnell be sent to jail. Her request was complied with, Dan being unable to procure $800 ball.

Ralph Delaney and Patrick Gallagher of Priceburg, were arrested last Wednesday for being drunk and disorder! and causing a disturbance in a Lacta-wanna avenue solon. In police court yesterday morning the youths in ex-plaining their conduct, told American Kasson that they came to town to paint the place. The aiderman sent them to jail for twenty days, remarking that per-haps their artistic ability might be used to good advantage by the sheriff, if the corridors of the prison need an artist's

MAYOR USES HIS POWER OF VETO

SCHEME TO CLEAN STREETS BY CONTRACT KNOCKED OUT.

An Effort Was Made to Override His Veto But it Was Not Successful. City Solicitor Directed Not to Take an Appeal in the South Side Sewer Mandamus Case-Number of Bids for Paving North Main Avenue Received-Protest Was Entered by Five Property Owners.

Mayor Balley returned to the select council last night, without his approvat, the resolution awarding to the Dunn Sprinkling and Street Cleaning company the contract for cleaning the paved streets of the city. An effort to pass the resolution notwithstanding the mayor's veto, failed. The veto is

I return without my approval the resolution awarding the contract for the cleaning of the pavements for the balance of the fiscal year to the Dunn Sprinkling and Street Cleaning company. I have several good and sufficient reasons for this veto. In the first place this resolu-tion empowers the Dunn company to employ as cheap labor as its managers deem fit. Absolutely no restrictions have been placed upon them. The interests of the city and of the taxpayers have been in way safeguarded.

During the prevalent hard times it is our duty to look for the employment and prosperity of our citizens. Scranton is not so large nor so rich that it can afford pay contractors to do the work for which our own officers are well he effect of this resolution would be to make the office of street commissioner sinecure. The sentiment of this com munity is opposed to the resolution and I feel that, in justice to myself and to every citizen, I must interpose my

WORK CAN PROCEED.

When the city solicitor's request for information as to whether he should take an appeal to the Supreme court from the opinion of the court of this county in the South Side sewer mandamus case came up Mr. Roche moved that an appeal be not taken and it was carried by a vote of 14 to 15. The ommon council merely filed the re-

Bids for paving North Main avenue and Providence Road were offered by the following: Abbot, Gamble Contracting company, of St. Louis, Mo .: Alcalraz Paving company, Philadelphia; Blair & Kennedy, Carbondale; James B. Reilly & Co., Philadelphia, and George McDonald. They were referred to the paving committee. The same action was taken in common council.

A protest against paving Providence Road from Putnam street to Bull's Head until a sewer is laid was presented by Mr. Roche, It was signed y George H. Brown, O. V. Palmer, Peter Cerini, C. S. Lowery and John M. Keisling. This protest was presented as a matter of form to preserve the rights of the complainants in case The funeral of Mrs. Thomas Conneil the matter is carried into the courts.

A further reason was to give them a hearing before the committee that will O'Boyle, street commissioner, was referred to the judiciary committee. It is in the sum of $5,000 and the sureties are John A. Mears and A. J. Casey.

An ordinance was introduced for payng that portion of Dix court, between Linden and Mulberry street not now paved. An ordinance passed on third reading was: Providing for the paying of Forest court with vitrified brick between Spruce street and the southerly end of said court in the Eighth ward.

FOR CHEMICAL ENGINES.

The following bids for a chemical engine were read: Racine Fire Engine company, $1,400; Charles T. Halloway, Baltimore, Md., $1,200; Fire Extinguisher Manufacturing company, $1,175, This engine is for the use of the Co lumbia company of the West Side.

The combination chemical engine and hose wagon now used by that company will be given to the Nay Aug company. The following bids were received for furnishing a combination chemical engine and hose wagon for the Relief company of Petersburg. Fire Extinguisher Manufacturing company, $1,400; Racine Fire Engine company, limited, $1,300; Charles T. Halloway, $1,470. The bids were referred to the fire department committee. A resolution was introduced and passed directing that when the new combination wagon arrives for the Relicf company the hose wagon now used by it be given to the Neptune Engine company, of South Scranton.

The American Fire Engine company presented bids agreeing to repair the Franklin engine for $450. An opinion of Mr. Basch, an expert, was read. It stated that the steamer can be put in good condition by retubing the boiler and repairing the engine and pump.

GOING TO CAMP BLACK.

More New York State Somers Pass Through This City.

Five cars forming a special train passed through this city yesterday at 3.45 a. m. bound for New York city. Aboard the cars were two full companies and a part company from Syracuse, Hudson, Catkskill and Odgens-burg, N. Y. There were about 389 men and officers and were destined for Camp Black where they will be at-tached to the Two Hundred and Third regiment, New York state volunteers on second call.

The two full companies numbering 106 men each, upon their arrival will be assigned and officered as follows: Company I (Hudson)—Richard C. Payne, captain S. J. Avery, first leutenant; L. H. Payne, second jeutenant, and Company K (Catskil)-W. W. Bennett, captain; J. G. Hannah, first feutenant; C. A. Vroman, second lieutenant. The town name following the company only indicates where the major portion in the company came from. The other men, about 50 strong, came from about Odgensburg and will be recruited from New York city men and assigned as follows: Company H (Odgensburg)-Martin Boyard, captain; D. S. Lucey, first lieutenant.

This makes the third lot of men who have passed through here for Camp Black from up Syracuse way and "still there's more to follow." Two or three companies will go through this morning. The Two Hundred and Third regiment can be safely trade marked Syracuse, owing to the number of that city and surrounding towns brave sons in it.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Conductor George E. Hammet Fatally Injured Near the West Lackawanna Avenue Crossing

George E. Hammet, the conductor of an accommodation train on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, was fatally injured early yesterday morning near the West Lackawanna avenue crossing. He died a few hours later.

Hammet's train was standing north of the crossing waiting for orders to pull into the yard, having just come down from Great Bend. The conductor was in his caboose preparing his report of the trip when a pusher that was coming down backward ran into the caboose

A moment before the crash Hammet saw his danger and tried to escape, He was too late and was crushed between the caboose and the last car of the train. He was badly injured internally and died soon after reaching the Moses Taylor hospital. George Chase was in charge of the engine that ran into the caboose. He said he did his best to stop the engine but found it impossible to do so. It slid.

Hammet was 43 years of age and lived at 527 North Rebecca avenue. He is survived by his wife and three small children. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Conductors and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Mutual Aid. The remains were taken to his late home from the hospital about 10 o'clock.

The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his home, 527 North Rebecca avenue. The remains will be conveyed to the Simpson Methodist Episcopal church at 2.30 o'clock, where the Rev. J. B. Sweet will conduct religious services.

The Lackawanna lodge, No. 95. Brotherhood of Railroad Conductors, and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Mutual Aid will attend the Interment will be made in Washburn street cemetery. Engineer Chase is under the care of Dr. F. C. Hall and two other physicians and his condition is considered serious. His grief became so uncontrollable after the accident that it was necessary to call in the doctors. They have scarcely left him since. At a late hour last night he had become hysterical and his mind was wandering.

OPINIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT

CITY HAS RIGHT TO CHANGE AS-SESSMENTS AT WILL.

Supreme Court Reverses the Lower Court in the Case of Joseph J. Jermyn Against the City of Scranton-Verdict Awarded to James Gavigan in His Suit Against the Atlantic Refining Company Will Stand-Lower Court Sustained in the Steere-Oakley Case.

The supreme court of Pennsylvania n session at Harrisburg, yesterday sanded down opinions in three Lackawanna county cases. It reverses Judge Archbald's ruling in the equity suit of Joseph J. Jermyn against the city assessors and the board of revision and appeals. It affirms the verdict of the lower court in the suit of James Gavigan against the Atlantic Refining company. And in the suit of C. C. Steere against D. K. Oakley it reverses the finding of the superior court and affirms the judgment of the lower court. The Steere-Oakley case has ac cumulated a bill of costs almost the size of the verdict.

No opinion was handed down in the Van Horn murder case. Attorney L. P. Wedeman was expecting a telegram from Frothonotary Green with regard to the disposition of the case. likelihood is that it will not be decided until September. Mr. Wedemen said yesterday that he is prepared to go to the United States supreme court with t on unconstitutional questions. He claims it deprived the defendant of a onstitutional right to allow the jury to go out and view the premises where the woman's throat was cut without bringing Van Horn along also.

The Jermyn equity suit against the assessors and board of revision and appeals arose over the increase of Mr. Jermyn's assessment. In 1895 his property in the Eighth ward was assessed $11,000. That was a triennial assessment. For the year 1897, however, the board acting under the authority of the act of 1895 issued a precept to the city assessors and a new assessment was made which raised Mr. Jermyn's valuation to $14,000. To secure relief from this extra a-sessment he brought equity proceedings.

MR. JERMYN'S CONTENTION. He set forth as his reasons that the valuation as fixed in 1895 could not be of the superior court and affirming the legally altered or changed until 1898, verdict of the lower court. the year of the next triennial assessment, as no changes had been made since 1895 on his property in the Eighth ward. The altered assessment, he said, was void for the further reason that the valuation was fixed by a so-called assistant assessor in the ward, when in fact no such officer or office had any existence

Judge Archbald in his opinion said that the provisions of the act of 1895 which gave to the board of revision and appeals the power of ordering a new assessment oftener than once in three years were vicious in principle and more than that, in his judgment, unconstitutional. The provision which was of special concern in that case was that which reads that the board of revision and appea" "may in any year other than a trier hal year, if they deem a new assessment necessary, on or before the first day of September, issue their precept to the city assessors requiring them to make out and return a full, just, and equal assessment of property within the city or such parts visable.

Judge Archbald said that until the hoard had spoken a taxpayer could have no idea whether the valuation of his property was to be subjected to a new assessment or not. The matter is left to the unguided judgment of a majority of the board and is subject to their varying caprices. The one thing lacking, Judge Archbald said, was the criterion by which the necessity for a new assessment is to be judged; this is vital and should appear by the law itself. The legislature did not say that under such and such circumstances, if the board deem necessary a new assessment may be ordered.

The city appealed from Judge Archbald's ruling with the effect stated. City Solicitor M. A. McGinley and Atorney James H. Torrey represented the city. I. H. Burns was attorney for Mr. Jermyn.

STEERE-OAKLEY CASE.

The case of Steere against Oakley is an interesting one. Vosburg & Dawson, the plaintiff's attorneys, in their paper book filed in the superior court have this to say: "It would be extremely difficult to find among the records of Pennsylvania a civil case that appeals more strongly to the sense of justice that is inherent in every heart than the one at bar. A poor farmer, owing a debt, borrows of a rich money lender enough to relieve his current necessities; implicitly trusts his creditor to figure the interest; toils and saves and grows old to pay the debt; is threatened by his creditor until he pays him what he demands; and in the end finds that the man whom he trusted has defrauded and cheated him."

In 1873 C. C. Steere, a farmer of Kingsley, Susquehanna county, borrowed $945.27 from D. K. Oakley and gave a mortgage. From time to time until 1887 Steere paid sums on the interest and principal, and on Oct. 16 of that year Oakley demanded a set-tlement in full, and claimed that Steere owed him $1243.18. The money to pay this claim was borrowed from a man named Henry Brewster. During all the years of their dealings, Cakley computed the interest. Steere was unable to figure and could barely do more than sign his own name. GAVIGAN CASE.

The judgment of the lower court was affirmed in the trespass suit of James Gavigan, of the Seventh ward, against the Atlantic Refining company, Mr. Gavigan brought suit for damages for the impairment of his comfort and home enjoyment resulting from the smell that came into premises from the defendant's oil tanks adjacently situated. Mr. Gavigan had lived there for years before the Refining company became his neighbor. After that though. he could not occupy the perch evenings, nor open the windows of his house for pure air. The case came up for trial before

Judge Edwards a few years ago. Hon. John P. Kelley, M. J. Donahoe and I. H. Burns were attorneys for Mr. Gavigan and Watson & Diehl represented the defendant. A verdict of $480 was found. The company appealed to the superior court and the verdict was reversed on the ground that Judge Edwards erred in charging the jury that Gavigan was entitled to recover damages for the discomfort of himself and family. The superior court said the man could recover for himself alone as he alone was the plaintiff.

On the next trial of the case the jury took a more liberal view of the question of damages and they awarded Gavigan $1,250. The company appealed it again, but this time to the supreme court, us the amount was over $1,000, And the supreme court rules that the verdict must stand.

STEERE'S REQUEST.

At the time of the settlement in 1887 Steere asked for some days of grace to be permitted to compute the interest. Oakley said he was in a big hurry for the money as he wanted to invest it in a silver mine, but assured him the figures were correct, and if they were not he would make them right. Steere called his son, Warren, in from the hayfield to take a hand in computing but the young man was not far enough advanced in figures, and at the best all be could do was to glance over Oakley's calculations. After a time Steere had the account calculated from beginning to end, and discovered that he overpaid about five hundred dollars. He demanded a repayment, but Oakley refused, and autt was begun in May, 1889, in the common pleas court of this county.

It first came to trial in 1895 before Judge Archbald. Oakley's defense was that he had charged Steere usurious interest, not a uniform rate, but ranging from 10 to 16 per cent. At times Oakley would be pressed hard for money he would go, he claimed, to Steere and ask for a settlement, Steere being unable to raise the money, would agree to pay a few per cent. more for the ensuing year, and it went on in that way from time to time. The law requires an action for usurious interest to be begun within six months after the payment is made. The suit brought by Steere was two years after the final payment and therefore recovery was barred. But Steere did not admit that it was a case of usury. He said he never agreed to pay any more than the legal rate of 6 per cent. and there was never any agreement about 10 to 16 per cent.

VERDICT IN CASE.

The trial before Judge Archbald resulted in a verdict of $1002.26 for Steere A new trial was granted, and in 1896 it came up before Judge Edwards, and on May 29 of that year a verdict of $661.79 was given in favor of Steere Judge Edwards refused a new trial and the case was appealed to the superior court. On July 23, 1897, the superior court reversed Judge Edwards. Attorneys Vosburg & Dawson took an appeal to the supreme court on a special allocatur and the result was a decree reversing the judgment

NON-SUIT WILL REMAIN.

Judge Simonton Refuses to Strike it Off in Devanney Case.

Judge Simonton, of Harrisburg, sent here yesterday two opinions in cases he tried in this court. One was the trespass suit of Ellen Devanney, of Carbondale, against the Lackawanna Valley Rapid Transit company for the death of her husband. Peter Devanney. The other was in the mechanics' lien case of Gibbons & Nolan against Ellen Moran. His opinion in the Devanney case was on a rule to strike off the non-suit heretofore granted. It was as follows: Plaintiffs principal witness on the sub ject of the manner in which the accident occurred which occasioned the death of the plaintiff's husband, testified that he standing on the stoop of a house, looked in the direction in which the car was coming, then stepped down upon the track and walked a short distance. The witness thought eighteen or twenty in the same direction in which the car was going, and consequently with his back to the car when it struck him and injured him so as to occasion his death. We do not think any other inference can be drawn from these facts, which were not in any essential particular modi-fied by any other evidence in the case, than that the decedent was guilty of contributory negligence, and we do not see how this may be made clearer by any extended discussion of the case. tiff's counsel argues that the effect of the decedent's acts is modified by the fact that the railway is on the side of the street where the sidewalk naturally would have been, and that he was a letter car rier and at the time of the accident in the service of the United States. There was no pretense that the railway was not where it had not been authorized to be, and we therefore cannot see how its location on the side of the street can affect the question. Neither do we think that the fact that one is a letter carrier excuses him in that which otherwise would be contributory negligence. Instead of crossing the railway track and walking parallel to it until he reached the point to which he was going, he chose to walk upon the track when a car was close behind, and the injury which caused his death resulted directly from this indiscretion on his part, and we are unable to see how it can be held otherwise than contributory gence. The motion to take off the non-sult is therefore refused.

In the case of Gibbons and Nolan against Ellen Moran Judge Simonton finds nothing to disturb the verdict, and directs that judgment be entered for the plaintiff on payment of the jury fee.

NEW TRIAL IS GRANTED. Judge McPherson's Opinion in the

Callendar-Kelley Case. Prothonotary Copeland received from Judge McPherson, of Harrisburg, yesterday an opinion granting a new trial in the case of Mrs. Margaret Callendar against Attorney John P. Kelley, as signee of the Olyphant Trust company, The opinion is as follows:

An examination of the notes of testimony makes it clear that the decision of this case turns upon questions—such, for example, as the credibility of witnesses— that can only be decided by a jury. The instruction, therefore, to find a verdict in favor of the plaintiff cannot be sus-tained, and the motion for a new trial must prevail. The rule for a new trial is made absolute.

The case was tried at the last term of court and after the jury was out a day and a night Judge McPherson instructed them to find a verdict for the plaintiff. This was done with the understanding that the judge would fully review the evidence later on and decide whether he had a right to give binding instructions.

FUNERAL OF MRS. SUSAN DALE. Interment Was Made in the Cemetery at Daleville.

The funeral of Mrs. Susan Dale, widow of the late William Dale, took place Wednesday afternoon at the family residence in Daleville. The impressive services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Ackley, who paid a high tribute to the life of the deceased. Rev. Dr. Hanks, a son-in-law of Mrs. Dale, spoke with emotion on her noble char acter. The five sons bore their dead mother's casket. They were T. H. Dale, M. H. Dale, D. W. Dale, E. G. Dale and Frank Dale. Interment was made in the village cemetery near her home.
