REESE-WATKINS WEDDING OCCURRED YESTERDAY.

Ceremony at the Bride's Home on Wayne Avenue—Farewell Reception is Given for Miss Elsie Leach. Niagara Company Making Great Preparations for Their Binghamton Trip—Chicken Thieves Making Life Miserable for the Owners of Choice Fowls.

An exceedingly pretty wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Reese, on Wayne avenue, yesterday morning, when their daughter, Miss Annie, was united in marriage to Morgan B. Watkins, a prominent young man of this end. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Horace Peckover, of the Puritan Congregational church, at 10:30 o'clock, in the presence of a large number of invited friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

Both are estimable young people. Mrs. Watkins is an accomplished organist and officiates in that capacity at the Puritan Congregational church. They will reside on Wayne avenue on returning from their honeymoon.

DEATH A RELIEF.

Death came as a relief to John Henry, Jr., of Warren street, yesterday morning, after two weeks of indescribable suffering from a gangrenous leg. A mule in the Cayuga mines is responsible for his death. Henry was kicked by the animal above the knee, an artery being ruptured. Gangrene was noticeable the second day. The physicians in attendance decided to amputate, but death was seen to be inevitable, for he would undoubtedly have died under the operation. The deceased was about twenty-four years of age. He was well liked by all his associates, being a quiet and unassuming young man. He was a member of Eastern Star commandery, Knights of Malta. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon from the family residence at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made in the Washburn street cemetery.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

A farewell reception was tendered Miss Elsie Leach at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Reese, on North Main avenue, Tuesday evening, previous to

THE GUNS OF THE LADRONES.

Old Cannon to Be Found in the Islands of the South Pacific.

A cannon being too big to be mislaid, it is generally known what becomes of old guns. The smoothbores of the civil war are known to have been used in soldiers' monuments and Grand Army Republic emblems.

Condemned cannon of an earlier period now keep their places in many coastwise towns, buried at street corners to the trunions and presenting upward either the cascabel or the muzzle blocked with an old cannon ball shrunken. The old forts and the military museums account for a few more. But these used cannot account for all the big guns of the past, and the melting pot is supposed to have received the rest of this metal war.

Much of the antique ordnance has been melted down into the pots and pans of peace, but there are very many thousands of ancient cannon scattered all over the Pacific and the East Indies. It causes the experienced island cruiser no more surprise to find ancient founders' names on the guns lying in the grass of savage towns than the trader in Africa feels at discovering still in use muskets that served their turn in the wars of Marlborough.

Some of these guns were mounted and employed by exploring expeditions of old, when new-found territory was calmly taken by the first comer. Such are the guns at Nukahiva and Hiva-oa, which tell the tale of the time when Americans annexed the Marquesas and built up a navy in the Pacific to defend them. Such, too, are the guns of San Juan and the Ladrones, which the Manila expedition has just seized.

While none of the batteries at San Juan is modern or efficient, one is conspicuously inefficient. This is a bastion so placed to protect the old careening beach on which the galleons were hoisted to make ready for the long voyage to Acapulco. These guns, richly decorated and piously dedicated, date back to the time when the whole Pacific was a Spanish lake closed to all adventurers but the stately march of the plate galleons between Manila and Mexico. Some of the guns in this bastion are old enough to have seen service when Drake pried open the rich Pacific.

Others of these guns are pirates' loot from armed merchantmen. Of such acquisition are the many guns in the beach towns of Mindoro and Mindanao and other southern Philippines, where piracy was relinquished only when its profits vanished as the gunboats patrolled the straits. But the biggest trade in old cannon used to be carried on in the South Seas. Every whaler carried a supply as ballast bound out, and each gun was a thing of value at the islands. For a cannon and one keg of powder any savage chief was glad to equip the whaler with all the kanakas needed for boats' crews. Each whaler was anxious to make a show of ordnance, and the civilized races have put a taboo on powder, and it is long since the South Sea Islanders have heard the sound of their neglected artillery.

LARGEST APE IN THE WORLD.

Rube is Bigger and Stronger Than John L. Sullivan.

From the Philadelphia Record. "The biggest orang-outang ever in captivity, the most wonderful ape ever seen by civilized man, has just been brought to this country."

He is now in the Philadelphia Zoological Gardens. "Rube" is the name they have given him in Philadelphia. He is one of the length of his whiskers and other features supposed to be peculiar to the inhabitant of remote country districts.

Rube's size is enormous and astonishing. It is convenient to compare him with John L. Sullivan, who is to most Americans an ideal of a well-grown man.

Rube stands five feet eleven inches in his bare feet. John L. Sullivan is only five feet ten and a half inches. Rube measures eight feet from tip of his outstretched arms. John L. Sullivan's measurement in this respect is only six feet and one inch.

Rube weighs 280 pounds. John L. Sullivan, in his best fighting condition weighed only 160 pounds.

These measurements are to a certain extent deceptive. Rube is a little bigger than Sullivan, but his strength is incalculably greater. A dozen Sullivan could not knock him out with their bare hands.

Give Rube a good, solid hold for his hands or feet, and he can pull 100 men to him. Probably Sullivan could pull three.

It is not alone as a creature of size and strength that Rube is interesting. He is one of a rare race that is fast disappearing from the earth. He is one of the nearest relatives of man among the beasts.

Rube came to the United States on the British steamer Ben Alder, which sailed from Singapore on April 25. Her voyage occupied forty-five days. She brought her cargo to Pierpont stores, in Brooklyn, where she arrived a week ago. The cargo included Rube and three of his family, dozens of common monkeys, and a large assortment of big pythons and wild animals from southern Asia.

Rube is fearfully human in appearance. He resembles an unspeakably ugly man. His age is estimated at 20. It is said that the orang-outang is full grown at twenty, and that under favorable circumstances he may live to be one hundred. Scientific observers believe that Rube's intellectual capacity is far superior to that of the illustrious gorilla Crowley and the famed chimpanzee Johanna. The problem is to induce him to exhibit a little of his capacity.

JOHNNY REB BROTHERS. A very pathetic incident that occurred during the recent reunion of Confederate veterans held in Nashville was related some time ago by a prominent state official. One night at a late hour the manager of one of the leading hotels in this city walked into the rotunda of his hostelry and observed an old Confederate, who appeared to be sleeping in a chair. He noticed that he was assigned to that hotel by a certain badge he wore, and being himself an ex-Johnny Reb, he decided to render the veteran a service by waking him and taking him to his room.

As he touched the veteran he observed that he had spent some time in worship at the shrine of Bacchus, and at that time was just recovering vigorous mentality. While this scene was being enacted another vet, who happened to be passing, stopped close by, as did the gentleman who told the story. "Hello, Johnny Reb! Have you secured a room?" asked the hotel manager.

"Yes," replied the awakened man, with apparent surprise. "What is your name?" "My name is Joe."

"I was with — regiment, and fought with the Army of Virginia," said the veteran who was standing by approached the two and asked the man: "What did you say your name was?" "My name is Joe," again replied the man.

"Where did you enter the army from?" "I enlisted at —, in —," replied the now astonished man.

As he replied to the last question the other man fell into his arms, weeping, and said: "Joe, don't you know me?" The veteran pushed him off, presuming that he, too, was in a turbulent state of mind, caused by imbibing drinks other than water.

The man would not be pushed off, and in his sobe said: "Joe, don't you know me?" "You are not John, for he was killed at Manassas," said the now thoroughly awakened and astonished man.

"Joe, I am your brother John. I was not killed at the battle of Manassas, and ever since the war I have looked all over the United States for you."

"Convinced at last, the long-lost brothers, locked in each other's embrace, stood and wept like children. They went to a room in the hotel and doubtless talked all night. All next day they were seen, walking arm in arm, with glowing faces, and relating to everyone the fact of their coming together after such a long separation. —Nashville Banner.
