THE INDIANS WON.

Had a Walk-over with Dunmore Saturday Afternoon.

The opening game of football was played at Alumni park Saturday afternoon, when the "Indians" of this city defeated the Dunmore Athletic club by the score of 21 to 0. The visitors were a set of big hoosiers, but could not play with the local eleven.

The weather was rather warm for football, and on that account the game was somewhat slow, the Dunmore men stopping repeatedly for wind. The game was decidedly one-sided, Carbondale losing the ball but once on "downs." During the first half the Indians succeeded in scoring three touchdowns and one goal, while in the second half they scored one touchdown. The last half was cut considerably as the visiting eleven went to pieces and the game went too much in the Indians' favor to be anyway interesting. Judging for the Indians' right half back, played a fine game, making several long runs besides tackling in excellent style. His run with Marlin's line bucking were the features of the game. The Indians' line was impregnable, each man being a Gibraltar on the line excepting up much better than he did last season. Horan for Dunmore did most of the playing. The Indians who were the champions of Northeastern Pennsylvania for '97, are now stronger than ever and are ready to answer challenges from any team in this section.

PECULIAR POISONS.

GENERATED IN THE HUMAN BODY

The Result of Imperfect Digestion of Food.

Every living thing, plant or animal, contains within itself the germs of certain decay and death. In the human body these germs of disease and death (called by scientists "Poisons") are usually the result of imperfect digestion of food; the result of indigestion or dyspepsia.

The stomach, from abuse, weakness, does not promptly and thoroughly digest the food. The result is a heavy, sodden mass which ferments (the first process of decay), poisoning the blood, making it thin, weak, and lacking in red corpuscles; poisoning the brain, causing headaches and pain in the eyes.

Bad digestion irritates the heart, causing palpitation and finally bringing on disease of this very important organ.

Poor digestion poisons the kidneys, causing Bright's disease and diabetes. And this is so because every organ, every nerve depends upon the stomach alone for nourishment, and renewal.

Bad digestion shows itself not only in loss of appetite and flesh, but in weak nerves and muddy complexion. The great English scientist, Huxley, said the best start in life is a sound stomach. Weak stomachs fail to digest proper quantity of digestive acids (gastric and hydrochloric) and peptogenic products; the most sensible remedy in all cases of indigestion is to take after meals one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they supply in a pleasant, harmless form all the elements that weak stomachs lack.

The regular use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure every form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

They increase flesh, insure pure blood, strong nerves, a bright eye and clear complexion, because all these result only from wholesome food well digested.

AVOCA.

Rev. John Warren McComb, of New York city, occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church yesterday morning. The large congregation present did not weaken the young speaker's abilities and his eloquence drew forth words of praise from all who heard him. He chose for his text the last clause of the 128th Psalm, fifth verse: "And Set Me in a Large Place." During the discourse his remarks he drew forth a beautiful picture of self sacrifice and compared it with the sacrifice of the psalmist. How he trusted in God and was delivered from his distress. Self sacrifice and the hopes and dreams founded on the spirit of Christ will not be shattered but will be fulfilled, if only in the other world. Rev. McComb is desirous of securing a pastorate in this state and whoever secures his services may be congratulated in their choice.

SPANISH FLAG HIS RUIN

The Thrilling Life and Equally Thrilling Death of Tom Day, a Desperado of the Maine Woods.

The lobster coves and lumber camps of Maine are the last places in which one seeks material for romances or tragedies, but the woods are full of them. There is no record of the event on the files of the war department, but one of the first and most desperate engagements of the war with Spain took place in the depths of a pine forest near the village of Centerville, Washington county, and the incident was not closed until Tom Day, who was called the wickedest man in Maine, was buried in the forest with the Spanish flag wrapped around his body. He had been the terror of Washington county for thirty-seven years, ever since he seceded from the United States and hoisted the Confederate flag over his cabin at Machiasport. Day came from Alabama originally—one seceder to remember why or how—and when the war broke out he defended the right of secession and publicly expressed his sympathy with the rebels. At first the people were inclined to make fun of him, and Tom Day's treasonable sentiments were the subject of much local humor, but after the battle of Bull Run, when he raised a Confederate flag over his cabin, the neighbors became indignant and attempted to haul it down. Day defended his principles with a shotgun. As a consequence one of the neighbors fell dead in his tracks, two were mortally wounded and several others were more or less filled with lead. He was finally overpowered and vengeance was visited upon him. They tied him to a tree by the thumbs and beat his bare back with birch rods until his screams were drowned with blood. They then set fire to his cabin, and the Confederate flag which he so stoutly defended disappeared when the roof fell in.

Day was arrested for murder and treason. He was tried in Boston and sentenced to imprisonment in the Dry Tortugas near Key West. At the close of the war he was released, and to the surprise of every one he came back to Maine, hunted up his wife and her sister, who had fled with them, and "took up" a lot of wild land near Centerville. He built a substantial and commodious cabin of logs and lived there with the two women like a recluse. He "minded his own business" and was seldom seen at the settlement. When groceries or store goods of any kind were needed the women came in to trade. They always seemed to have plenty of money. Where they got it was a mystery. Several times Day had once more with the public. He was accused of murdering a theological student, who was on a hunting trip down that way. But the coroner's jury couldn't find any evidence that Day killed him. The man was found dead in the woods near Day's house and the women testified that he called there twice and asked for food and shelter. There was a moral certainty that Day shot him, but no legal evidence of the fact. Several other crimes were laid at his door, but he was never convicted nor even indicted.

When the trouble with Spain broke out last spring a report reached Centerville that Tom Day had hoisted a Spanish flag over his cabin, and two or three young men made a reconnaissance in that direction to ascertain the truth. The older and wiser residents advised them to let him alone. They insisted that it would be a dangerous lunatic and that it would do more harm than good to interfere with him; it certainly did no injury to the United States government and gave Spain no encouragement, they said, even if a murderous old crank did raise a red and yellow flag over his log cabin; but the young men around the village were hotheaded. They didn't intend to allow Tom Day or any other traitor to flaunt his treason in their faces. So they organized a posse and attacked the cabin.

Day appeared at the door when they halted him and fired both barrels of his shotgun into the crowd without waiting for a parley. The volley was returned in an instant, when, to the surprise of his assailants, Day shut the door and retired into the cabin. Pickets were posted to prevent his escape and after a long wait the leader approached the door and demanded admission. One of the women responded and asked what was wanted. She was told that the Spanish flag must come down. She replied that she would attend to the matter immediately, and within three minutes it disappeared from the pole on the top of the house.

The object of the expedition having been accomplished, the party prepared to go back to Centerville, but the leaders left a couple of men on guard in ambush, where they could watch the cabin unseen. During the night they were astonished to see Day's wife and sister digging a grave in the garden and they went over to offer their assistance. From the women they learned that the desperado had received a mortal wound in the first volley that was fired and had died within a few minutes after. They assisted to bury him in the garden, and when, in the absence of a coffin, Mrs. Day proposed to wrap the body of her husband in the Spanish flag that had caused all the trouble they consented, because, as one of them explained, "It was the easiest way out of it."
