Funeral of the Neary Boys Will Take Place Today.

The bodies of John J. and John F. Neary, cousins, who were killed in a copper mine in Butte City, Mont., Friday last, reached the city yesterday afternoon, and were taken to their home in the city. The bodies were removed to the residence of his parents on Mary street, and the remains of John F. Neary was taken to his home on Wales street. The latter is survived by his wife and a family of four children.

The Daily Intermountain, an evening paper of Butte City, in its issue of the day of the terrible accident, gives a lengthy account of the affair. The two men were working in the Green Mountain copper mine, in what is known as the 1800-foot level. They worked nearby one another, and were about finishing their work at 7 o'clock in the morning when the accident occurred. Last week they were on the last shift, and Friday morning John F. Neary got to work earlier. He was waiting not a long distance from his cousin, and he shouted to him that he was too long in finishing. The waving hand then arrested the attention of the other, when an explosion occurred, the concussion of the explosion throwing him back several feet. He was taken to St. James' hospital and died shortly after.

John J. Neary was instantly killed, he being horribly mangled. The right leg was torn from the body, and his face and head were severely lacerated. The accident occurred from a premature blast. The funerals will take place from the residence of the late afternoon at 3 o'clock. Services will be held in Holy Rosary church and interment made in the Cathedral cemetery.

A Modern Fable. Once upon a time a tramp was sorely in need of something to eat, and approached a fat man, saying: "If you will give me the wherewithal to satisfy the craving of the inner man, I will kill all the rats about the place."

"Agreed," said the tiller of the soil, and he ordered his good wife to give the tramp a square meal. After the tramp had devoured everything in sight he went to the wicket and selected a stout club, then, seating himself on the porch, he said to the fat man: "Now bring on your rats."—Chicago News.

FIVE YEAR OLD ARTHUR STORR BITTEN BY A DOG.

Brute Was Owned by Charles Kaestner and was Shot After Much Difficulty—Funeral of Michael Coughlin—Interment in Minooka Catholic Cemetery—Officers for James Connell Lodge of Odd Fellows Nominated—Prof. Edward Grambo Chosen Leader of the Germania Maennerchor.

Arthur, the five-year-old son of Charles Storr, of Cedar avenue, was bitten by Prince, the black dog owned by Hotelman Charles Kaestner, yesterday afternoon. The little fellow was playing with the animal in the yard at his home, the two families living in the Kaestner building, when suddenly the dog sprang on the boy, putting his teeth into the calf of his left leg.

The screams of Arthur attracted his mother, who found her son semi-conscious and bleeding profusely from the wound. Dr. Koib was summoned, cauterized the incision and ordered the dog shot. Not anyone was more inclined to end the dog's life than Mr. Kaestner, and he sent to Patrolman Gscheldle's residence, asking that the officer execute the brute. The patrolman responded. The animal was tied to a post and when every detail was arranged the patrolman drew his revolver, aimed, pulled the hammer, but there was no issue from the weapon. Again and again the effort was repeated but with the same result. An investigation showed that there were no cartridges in the revolver.

All hands laughed and during the merriment the dog took French leave. He was captured and again tied, and Mr. Kaestner, the intemperate, getting his double-barrel gun, said he would finish the job. He fired four shots that went wide of the mark. Finally Mr. Storr, father of the injured boy, undertook the task and was successful. It is not thought that the injury will result seriously.

WHERE IS THOMAS B. RICHEY. Disappeared as If Engulfed in an Earthquake. From the Washington Post.

At 9 o'clock on Tuesday evening, August 23, Thomas Beall Richey, of Woodstock, Va., walked out of the Howard House, corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Sixth street, and from that moment has never been heard of. He disappeared as utterly as if he had been a tremendous cataclysm had engulfed him. He was canceled as completely as though a convulsion of nature had buried him. Nothing more mysterious has ever occurred in Washington. A man in the prime of life, a prosperous merchant, a devoted husband, a sincere Christian, sober, of high repute and influential family connections, Thomas Beall Richey passed from the Howard House into antebellum as absolute as death itself. That such a thing could happen in the very heart of Washington, at an hour when the whole city was awake and under circumstances of perfect public order and tranquility, is as astounding as any romance ever concocted by Gaboriau or Dr. Bolognoby. Indeed, the bizarre performance and takes rank with those appalling facts which prove to us how much stranger than all imaginable fiction is the simple truth.

There are details and collaterals which go to intensify the mystery. Mr. Richey stopped over in Washington for the purpose of locating or tracing his baggage, which had gone astray. He had set out from New York, where he had been purchasing a stock of goods, leaving his wife to pay a brief visit to her family, but on reaching the Capital found that his trunk was missing. On that account he put up at the Howard House, awaiting the result of a telegram to his brother-in-law in New York and, meanwhile, wrote to his niece in Woodstock, advising her of his detention. In the note he explained that he was waiting for his trunk, and would take the train for home as soon as it turned up. He closed his message by saying it was so warm that he intended to take a ride on the electric cars probably into the suburbs, with a view of enjoying the fresh air while the city cooled off. The remarkable fact in this connection is that while the letter itself was in Mr. Richey's well-known handwriting and exhibited not the slightest sign of physical or mental perturbation, the envelope was addressed in cigraphy totally unfamiliar to every one of Mr. Richey's friends and relatives. The hotel stationery was not used. It was nothing to indicate the locality from which it was sent. But the postoffice brand on the outside showed that it had been taken up somewhere in Washington at 2:30 a. m. Wednesday morning. The presumption is, therefore, that Mr. Richey wrote the letter after leaving the hotel—possibly several hours afterward—and that some one in whose company he then was undertook to address and mail it. Another circumstance tending to complicate the mystery is that inquiry subsequently made at the Pennsylvania depot showed that the trunk had reached there next day, that the check had been presented and the property removed. A telegram was received at the hotel after Mr. Richey's disappearance. It was from his brother-in-law in New York, saying that the trunk had been forwarded from the Courtland street ferry office, and it was opened by one of the lost man's brothers. The telegram gave the number of the check, and so it was an easy matter to ascertain that it had been taken up at the depot. It is also a logical conclusion that the person presenting the check must have got it from Mr. Richey. Could it have been the same man who addressed the letter which was stamped 2:30 a. m., August 24, and sent to Woodstock?

Altogether this strikes us as one of the most remarkable episodes in the history of Washington. Considering all the circumstances—the time, the place, the well-known character of the man, everything—it constitutes as profound and perplexing a mystery as ever figured in song or story. Mr. Richey disappeared on the night of Tuesday, the 23d—eight days ago—and up to a late hour last night not a trace of him, however faint, had been developed. His friends have searched the city high and low. They have visited the hospitals, the police stations, even the morgues. Not a gleam of light has been thrown upon the case, silence and
