THE STORY OF

Statesman.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

as a fool dies."

of Colonel Quay.

A BRAVE SOLDIER.

SENIOR SENATOR.

His first memorable achievement was in securing the passage in 1890, of the McKinley tariff bill. It had been hung up in the senate all summer, the Democratic opposition preventing its coming to a vote. Only a politician like Senator Quay could have effected the arrangements whereby action was expedited, and an early vote taken when, of course, the bill passed. This measure was of inestimable advantage to the immense and diversified interests of Pennsylvania.

HIS SKILL AND ADROITNESS. This is what the Bulletin of the American Iron and Steel association. one of the most conspicuous trades organs in the United States, said in reference to Senator Quay's connec-tion with the McKinley bill:

"Both in the senate and in the committee of conference Senator Quay's assistance was invaluable in securing the adoption of the rates of duty which were embraced in the McKinley bill as it passed the house. His effort to secure the retention of the original McKinley rates were in the main successful. But this was not the only service Senator Quay rendered to the industries of his state and the country in connection with the McKinley tariff bill. The bill was jeopardized in the senate by the Federal elections bill of that year, the so-called "Force bill," which Republican senators were determined to pass, and which Democratic senators, who were in the minority, were determined to defeat by obstructive tactics, or in other words by talking the bill to death. If this scheme of the Democrats had been carried out, they would not only have succeeded in defeating the "Force bill" but they would also have prevented the passage of the McKinley tariff bill through the senate, as the time consumed in killing the "Force bill" would have prevented the considera-tion of the McKinley bill. Senator Quay had the skill and adroitness to rescue the McKinley bill from this serious dilemma by securing the adoption of an order of business which gave it the right of way over the "Force bill." Thenceforward the Mc-Kinley bill had plain sailing in the senate.

It was chiefly the passage of this measure that gave us our magnificent president, whose name it bore, and who was the original author of it. Again, in 1894, when the Democratic Wilson tarin hill was before congress, Senator Quay implayed his great generalship in legislation, and his devovotion to the cause of protection as understood and practiced in Pennsylvania. Upon this occasion he found voice enough to talk. Indeed, he threatened to talk the Wilson bill to death unless the interests of Pennsylvania received better treatment in the measure, and in futherance of this threat he delivered his famous obstructive speech, occupying twelve days in April, May and June, with the promise of more before the bill should come to a vote. He succeeded even beyond his expectations. This is what the Manufacturer, another prominent trades journal. has to say relative to Senator Quay's services at this time:

Whatever may be the faults or the deficiencies of Senator Quay, the manufacturers of Pennsylvania and the country will not soon forget beyond sum of over $5,000,000 is now being dis- | Idiot." The play was written for laughtributed annually from the state treasury, relieving from local taxation, to that extent, the individual taxpayers. The people of the state are not likely to forget this in the near future, nor will they fail to give proper credit to

It was Senator Quay, also, who wrote the plank in the state platform some years since, committing the party to legislation for the equalization of taxation, as desired by the farmers of the state and owners of land generally. And, following this party declaration, revenue legislation was enacted largely increasing the tax rate upon corporation property, money at interest, etc., which, together with the large revenue from licenses, provides not only the millions appropriated for school purposes, but, as well, for the charitable institutions of the state, without the slightest increase of the burdens upon the masses. . .

Shortly after Senator Quay entered the senate he was made chairman of the Republican national committee, and in that capacity he conducted the great campaign of 1888, which elected Benjamin Harrison president of the United States. Who does not recall that memorable political battle? Surely the public do remember it, though Senator Quay's detractors would be mightily pleased if the people would only forget this period in American history.

Grover Cleveland had served as president for four years, having been declared elected in 1884 over that prince of statesmen, James G. Blaine, by the vote of New York, though it was then generally believed, and now generally conceded, that Mr. Blaine had carried New York, but had been counted out in that state, and therefore cheated out of the presidency. Upon the day the great campaign of 1888 opened, Chairman Quay registered a vow that there should be no cheating that time, and that in the event of General Harrison's election, he should be president. This is what he said:

"This is a Republican state. Blaine was elected. I do not propose that the Democrats shall steal New York from Harrison. The false registration must be stopped. The recount and the change of votes from Harrison to Cleveland must be prevented at all hazards. This must and shall be an honest election."

THE HISTORIC CAMPAIGN OF 1888.

And what a magnificent campaign it was, and how adroitly managed! In spite of the fact that the whole United States government, with its hun-dreds of thousands of officeholders, was in the hands of the Democrats, and Tammany Hall was then in the zenith of its power. Harrison was elected, having carried New York, though by a small majority. But the contest did not end with the close of the polls in New York. The Tammany machine, finding itself beaten, endeavored to repeat the work of 1884-count out the Republican candidate; and throughout that memorable night and until evening of the following day, desperate tactics were resorted to in the effort to count Cleveland in. But Chairman Quay was ready for them, having prepared for just such an emergency. The great conspiracy of the Tammanyites was folled, and General Harrison was duly declared elected president of ing purposes only and as such more than fills its requirements. The dialogue is bright and witty and the scenic
