KENNY TELLS OF HEALEY'S KILLING

WAS BEING CHOKED TO DEATH WHEN HE STRUCK BLOWS.

He Attempts to Refute County Detective Leyshon's Testimony That His Return and Surrender Were Induced by the Fact That He Learned of the Officers Being in Pursuit of Him and That Capture Was Inevitable—Did Not Draw a Knife on Healey.

All the testimony in the Kenny murder trial was in an adjoining trial yesterday and the case will probably go to the jury this afternoon. Assistant District Attorney Thomas stated at the close of the day that he would press a first degree verdict, presenting the theory that Kenny nursed his wrath until he encountered Healey on the dark and lonesome gravelly track and there with no one to bear witness to the deed, proceeded to carry out a threat he had made in Curran's saloon to cut Healey's heart out.

Mr. Murphy, who will close for the defense, will confine himself almost solely to an exposition of the theory of self defense, dwelling particularly upon Healey's repeated assaults, unprovoked and unresented by Kenny, the retreat of Kenny and his most remarkable self-restraint, which kept him from making a return of the attacks until he was forced in order to preserve his own life to strike back.

MR. LEYSHON'S TESTIMONY. Mr. Leyshon gave testimony tending to show that Kenny's return and surrender was not wholly voluntary but rather that he only came back when he learned that officers had been in his father-in-law's house in Trumansburg looking for him and that his capture was inevitable. One of Mr. Leyshon's statements was to the effect that Constable McHale, of Archbald, came to him and said he had received a letter from Kenny bidding him ask the county detective if he would be easy on him if he gave himself up. To this Mr. Leyshon told McHale to reply that he would make no promises of what he would do.

Michael Craig, now a resident of Pittston avenue, next testified that he met Kenny the night of the killing, as the latter was taking the car at Archbald, and that Kenny told him he had stabbed Healey and was going down to Prichester to lay low until the trouble blew over. Mrs. Bridget Murphy swore that she was with Kenny's sisters when Kenny came along after having committed the deed and that he told them he had stabbed Healey and was going to flee. Kenny, upon taking the stand, in the afternoon, denied having seen Craig or Miss Murphy and was corroborated in this latter regard by his sisters, and in relation to his return he positively stated that he had no communication whatever with McHale or Leyshon and that as far as he knew no officers had been looking for him at his father-in-law's house. In refuting a statement of the county detective that he had returned by the Ontario and Western on a pass sent him by Mr. Leyshon, Kenny stated that he came back via the Lehigh Valley and Delaware and Hudson roads and gave minute details of his trip.

KENNY'S STORY. Kenny's story of the affair in the saloon and the incidents up to the time he started up the track after the assault on the crossing did not differ materially from the story of the commonwealth's witnesses. As to his drawing a knife in Curran's saloon and making a threat against Healey he was not clear. He might have had his knife in his hand but he did not use it in any threatening manner.

When he started up the track, after the assault at the crossing, he was not aware that Healey was following him, believing that Fitzpatrick had succeeded in pacifying him. He had proceeded about two hundred feet, walking briskly, when he felt a hand grab him from behind and the next instant he was thrown heavily to the ground. He fell with his back striking the easterly rail, his head striking outside the track. Healey was upon him in a twinkling and clutched him about the throat with one hand while with the other he inflicted upon him mean and brutal punishment. "Now I've got you, you—now—now—now," said Healey tightening his grip and thumping Kenny's head against the ground. Kenny felt himself suffocated and fearing he would be choked to death and suffering awful agony from the punishment Healey was inflicting he drew his knife from his trousers pocket with his left hand, opened the blade with his right and jabbed at Healey's hands to make him release his hold.

CRAWLED TO HIS FEET. Healey got up and Kenny crawled to his feet and started off. Healey called after him, "If I'm cut, you won't sleep tonight." Kenny fearing to stay in his own house, in consequence of Healey's threat, left, after changing his clothes, and came to Scranton, leaving word for his wife to join him in this city on Monday, when they would proceed to Trumansburg, as they had previously arranged. He stayed at the home of his aunt, Mrs. John Gurrie, on the Diamond flat, over Sunday and on Monday, in company with his wife, went to the home of the American Legion, at Delaware, Lackawanna and Western train. The first he heard of Healey's death was through a letter from his parents, received two days after Healey died. He had no money, but as soon as his father sent him $5 in response to his request, he came on to Archbald and gave himself up to Squire Gildea. The "squire" turned him over to Constable McHale, who took him to the county jail the next day, allowing him to remain in his father's house over night and meeting him at an appointed place in the morning.

Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills will prevent and cure biliousness.

Cure... Biliousness

NOT NECESSARY TO STAMP THEM

ATTORNEY GENERAL GRIGGS HAS REVEALED MR. SCOTT'S EXCESS BAGGAGE CHECKS AND REBATE FARE CHECKS DO NOT COME UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE WAR REVENUE BILL—SOME OF THE OTHER RECENT DECISIONS BEARING UPON DISPUTED POINTS OF THE BILL—WAR REVENUE STAMP CANNOT BE USED TWICE UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES.

An opinion by Attorney General Griggs states that rebate fare checks and rebate fare checks are not subject to the provisions of the war revenue bill and will not be stamped. Many railroad companies discontinued the use of these checks after it was stated by the revenue authorities that it was necessary to put a stamp on them.

MINOR COURT CASES. They Were Heard Before Judges McClure and Gunster. Judge McClure, sitting in court room No. 2 yesterday morning heard two assault and battery cases from Greenfield. George Ribbenberg was defendant in the first case and was charged with having struck Joseph Sheek, the prosecutor, with a stone on the 18th June last. The defendant did not deny the charge, but stated that he knew nothing about it until he awakened the next morning and found he was considerably bruised. He stated that he was subject to epileptic fits and that he had had one about that time. The jury didn't seem to think that a man in an epileptic fit would throw stones and fight, and returned a verdict of guilty. The court sentenced the defendant to 30 days and costs of prosecution. The fine was afterwards remitted by the court.

In the other case Lewis E. White was defendant and was charged with having struck and knocked down his mother-in-law, Mrs. E. F. Taylor, on the night of July 16. The difficulty in this case grew out of a dispute concerning the defendant's eight-year-old boy, who was in the custody of Mrs. Taylor. The defendant asserted that he was attacked by his mother-in-law, who scratched his face, and that he simply shoved her away. The verdict was not guilty, the costs being equally divided between the prosecutrix and defendant.

SHAFER TRIED. Adolph Shafer was then tried on a charge of felonious wounding, the prosecutor being John Hall, a bartender at the Hotel in Providence. Hall testified that on the evening of Feb. 16 last the defendant and several others came into the saloon and began shaking dice with him. The defendant became angry and Hall ordered him out, upon which he drew a revolver and simply shoved her away. The verdict was not guilty, the costs being equally divided between the prosecutrix and defendant.

BOTH ABSENT. Both prosecutor and defendant having absented themselves for two successive terms, District Attorney Jones advised the court that the case of Harvey in the robbery of Foster's store, on Hamont street, was acquitted. Harvey swore positively that Williams was with him when the theft was committed, but the witness who swore with equal positiveness that it was untrue; that his participation in the crime consisted solely in buying ten cents' worth of tobacco from Harvey. The larceny by baillee case in which George Jacobus was defendant and L. H. Williams, of the American Legion, Carbondale, prosecutor, was settled amicably.

WAS NATURALIZED EARLY. Papers Granted When He Was Only Eighteen Years of Age. Out of thirty-five witnesses examined in the naturalization case of George Jacobus was defendant and L. H. Williams, of the American Legion, Carbondale, prosecutor, was settled amicably.

WEBER AND FIELD'S Big New York Burlesque Company to Appear at the Gaiety. Manager Van Osten has arranged with those popular New York managers, Weber & Fields, to play their last season's big success, "The Glad Hand," at the Gaiety. This magnificent extravaganza was on the boards at Weber & Fields' new Music Hall, at Broadway and Thirtieth street, all of last season, making such a decided hit that this year they organized a specially selected company of vaudeville talent and sent the piece on a tour. The New York success of the burlesque has been more than duplicated on the road; in fact, it is one of the few substantial hits which has left New York to tour the country.
