HEARING IS ON IN IMPEACHMENT CASE

NOTHING POSITIVELY INCRIMINATING SO FAR DISCLOSED.

Prosecution Must Proceed to Establish Its Case by What is Virtually Negative Testimony and is Further Handicapped by Being Unable to Compel the Defense to Produce Certain Papers—In Two Instances Testimony Favorable to the Accused is Given by the Prosecutor's Witnesses.

The hearing in the impeachment proceedings brought by ex-Alderman C. M. DeLong against Alderman J. P. Kelly, of the Eighteenth ward, was held yesterday before Attorney J. W. Carpenter, the commissioner appointed by court to take the evidence. Attorney P. F. Loughran represented the defendant. Hon. John P. Kelly and Attorney W. W. Taylor appeared for the accused. L. M. Schoch is the official stenographer.

Nothing of a definite nature that would tend to incriminate Alderman Kelly was disclosed. Circumstances that might be considered strongly suspicious were developed, but as courts do not act on suspicions it might be said that yesterday's proceedings failed in any way to fasten guilt on the accused magistrate. The hearing was first directed into the alleged fictitious case which it is claimed were manufactured for the purpose of illegally collecting costs from the county. A transcript which represented one of the alleged fictitious cases would be presented. The transcript testified that he searched high and low for the parties to the case but could not find that any such persons ever existed. In several instances men answering to the names of the parties to the case in question were put on the stand and testified that they had never figured in the case, and in the majority of instances they knew of no one else of their name heretofore.

TESTIMONY ABOUT BAIL.—Where bail was accepted by another alderman, the alderman would be called upon to testify as to whether or not the acceptance was regular and genuine. In each instance yesterday it was found that bail was taken and entered as the warrant indicated.

The attorneys for the accused objected to the admission of almost every bit of evidence offered and succeeded in having much of it ruled out. For instance, objection was made to Mr. DeLong's testimony regarding his efforts to locate the parties named in a transcript on the ground that it was immaterial and did not prove that the parties do not exist. Again when John Smith, for instance, would testify that he was not the prosecutor in the case of John Smith against John Brown, objection would be offered on the ground that there are other John Smith's and nothing in the transcript would tend to show that the witness was the John Smith intended.

The prosecution made a demand for the transcript in each case for the purpose of proving its regularity, but the defense refused to present them, holding that a defendant need not furnish any evidence that would tend to incriminate himself. Commissioner Carpenter directed that this matter be certified to Judge Archbald for a fair ruling.

The transcript of the larceny case of Philip Weisburger, of 809 Scranton street, against John O'Halligan, of 112 Northampton street, Wilkes-Barre, was the first taken up. The allegation was that the parties named have no existence and that the case is a fictitious one.

COULD NOT BE FOUND.—Mr. DeLong told of futile efforts to find the parties. Samuel Weisburger, who lives at 907 Scranton street, went on the stand and testified that he was the only Weisburger living on Scranton street and that he was not the prosecutor in this case. In question, Philip Weisburger, of 429 South Washington avenue, who, it is claimed, is the only man of that name in this city, swore that he was not the prosecutor in question.

When Mr. DeLong was on the stand Mr. Kelly tried to bring out that he was prosecuting these proceedings through malice. He asked him whether or not he had been refused an engagement by sought by Alderman Kelly and whether the money he had received for serving writs for the case Kelly was gone and that he intended to make more; also as to whether or not he had said that he would impeach Alderman Kelly if it cost him a thousand dollars.

To all these questions Mr. DeLong answered in the negative and said that he was prompted only for the public good. William Richards, who was named as bondsman in the Weisburger case, was sworn but could not say positively that he went for O'Halligan. He was members having signed a paper as surety for O'Halligan in some dealing or another in Alderman Kelly's court, but could not say that it was in this particular case. The matter had quite passed from his memory, he said. Mr. Loughran asked that the bail piece be produced, that the witness might say whether or not it was his signature that appeared thereon, but the defense refused to produce it on the grounds above mentioned.

ANOTHER CASE.—Another alleged fictitious case delved into was that of A. Arnold, of Carbondale, against John Butler, of Carbondale. The only John Butler that Mr. DeLong could find testified that he never had a case in Alderman Kelly's court, admitted having taken bail in such a case when the prisoner was brought before him by Constable James Clark. The other parties to the case could not be found. Mr. DeLong testified.

In the case of William T. Jenkins, of

Dandruff is Disease Ayers Hair Vigor

Scranton, against John Pitman, of Philadelphia, effort was made by the prosecution to show that the case was fictitious, but when "Squire T. M. Moyles, of Laurel Run, was put on the stand he recognized his signature backing" the warrant and recollect that it was presented to him on the day in question for backing.

In the case of Celia Rhodes, of Oakford court, against May Irwin, of Wilkes-Barre, neither the principals nor the bondsman, John Irwin, of Wilkes-Barre, could be found by Mr. DeLong, although he made untiring efforts to locate them.

James Loftus, of Emmet street, was called to testify whether or not he was the prosecutor in the larceny case of John Loftus against Thomas D. Burns, of Wilkes-Barre. He said he was not. Mr. DeLong told that he was unable to find that any such person as Thomas D. Burns or his bondsman, G. T. Dolan, existed.

Attorney Kelly asked Mr. DeLong why he had subpoenaed Mr. Loftus, of Emmet street, rather than any of the dozen other men by the name of James Loftus in this city. Mr. DeLong replied that it was because this James Loftus lived in the Eighteenth ward.

MR. DE LONG'S REPLY.—"Wasn't it rather because you knew he would be the James Loftus who was the prosecutor in this case?" Mr. Kelly asked. Mr. DeLong replied that he had not asked the witness whether or not he was the prosecutor in the case in question. He simply subpoenaed him, he said, and knew not what he was going to do with him.

The hearing will be resumed at 9 o'clock this morning. Some time during Monday night or yesterday morning the office of Alderman Kelly was broken into. The desk was opened and the papers tossed about as if by some one searching for something the desk contained. The drafts on the stove were opened to their widest and when the alderman came around in the morning the stove was at a white heat but for the slight protection on the wall the place would probably have taken fire.

Alderman Kelly says that the provokers were after papers that would have been useful, supposedly, to the prosecution in the impeachment case. He had these papers locked in his safe.

FORM OF THE BALLOT.

Certified to County Commissioners by the Secretary of the Commonwealth—It Will Contain Nine Columns.

The secretary of the commonwealth yesterday certified to the county commissioners the form of the official ballot for Lackawanna county and the names of the candidates that are to appear on it. There will be nine columns on the ballot and the order in which they will be printed is as follows: Independent Citizens' party, United States, Democratic, Prohibition, People's, Socialist, Labor, Liberty, Honest Government and Independent citizens. The ninth and last column will contain no names. In this the voter has the privilege of writing the name of any man whose name does not appear on the ballot.

The names of Dr. S. C. Swallow and William Trickett, dean of Dickinson law school, will appear on the ballot in four different columns. Dr. Swallow is the candidate for governor of the Commonwealth, Trickett for Cornell University.

The names of the candidates for the superior court of the Democratic, Prohibition, People's and Labor party, in the eighth column under the heading "Independent Citizens' party" only one name will appear, that of Cornelius Smith, candidate for judge. There will be no circle at the head of this column, the ballot law providing that it shall be placed only over a group of offices. Those who desire to vote for Mr. Smith will have to make a mark opposite his name in the small square provided for that purpose.

AMOUNT OF COAL MINED IN WORLD

RATE AT WHICH PRODUCTION HAS INCREASED.

American Competition is Increasing in the Far East and if the Philippines are Retained by the United States They Will Still Further Strengthen the Hold of the States. Consumption of Coal in the East is Greatly Increasing, but its Failure is Largely a Matter of Speculation.

"The statement recently issued by the board of trade, showing the production and consumption of coal and the production of persons employed in coal in the principal countries of the world in each year from 1853 to 1896, as far as the particulars can be stated, is in many respects a document of the greatest importance, as it gives an index of the state of industry in the chief countries of the world for which serves to show the relative position of Britain." says the British Trade Review.

"The statement is, of course, largely made up of tables of statistics, into the details of which we cannot enter. It is, however, so constructed as to be possible to give our readers such an idea of its contents that they will be able to note some of the lessons to be learned from them. The following is the production of 1896 of the most important coal-producing countries of the world: United Kingdom, 193,901,000 tons; United States, 171,416,000 tons; German empire, 85,690,000 tons; France, 28,750,000 tons; Belgium, 22,250,000 tons; Russian empire, 9,225,000 tons; Japan, 9,000,000 tons; British India, 8,848,000 tons; Canada, 3,743,000 tons; Australasia, 5,545,000 tons.

"The most instructive point in the tables, however, is the rate at which production has increased in the various countries, that rate being far greater in the United States, Germany, Russia and Australasia than in the United Kingdom. We will consider the far east by itself a little further on. If, now, we look at the comparative cost per ton of coal at the pit-mouth in the principal countries, we have: United Kingdom, 8s. 6d.; United States, 4s. 9d.; Germany, 6s. 11d.; France, 8s. 8d.; Belgium, 7s. 7d.; Japan, 5s. and the average in Australasia, 6s. 9d. From these figures we see that the United States, which was once our best customer, comes very near to us in total output, and from the price per ton at which they can produce they are certain to become one of our most, if not our most, formidable competitors.

COST OF TRANSPORT.—"No doubt the cost of transport from the pits to the sea coast will be considerable, while the rapid increase of industrial production in the United States will create a demand which will limit the amount available for exportation; still, the resources of the country are so enormous that we must expect huge quantities to be sent to foreign countries. There will therefore not only be increased competition in manufactured goods, but also in the production of coal.

"We have recently shown that American competition is increasing in the far East, and if the Philippines are retained by the United States they will limit the amount available for exportation; still, the resources of the country are so enormous that we must expect huge quantities to be sent to foreign countries. There will therefore not only be increased competition in manufactured goods, but also in the production of coal.

"The consumption of coal per head of population is of course found in the comparative table of countries where steam traction and machinery are used; such as the United Kingdom, the United States and Belgium; and the lowest in those countries where machinery is, comparatively speaking, but little used, such as Russia and Australia. In France the consumption of coal per head of a population for a country so far advanced in civilization at first sight appears to be very small, amounting to only .88 of a ton per head, as compared with 2.45 tons per head in Belgium and 3.82 tons per head in the United Kingdom; but this is accounted for in great measure by the huge quantity of fuel of other sorts, such as turf, wood and lignite, which are extensively used in that country. The British coal, whose the largest amount of coal is consumed are Canada, New Zealand and the New South Wales, where the consumption amounts respectively to 1.26 tons, 1.13 tons and 1.11 ton per head of the population.

THE EASTERN TRADE.—"The most interesting and one of the most important developments of the coal trade is that which is taking place in the far east. The position was reviewed by a recent article in the Statist, and the following was given as the present annual coal-producing capacity of the Pacific and the far east: British India, 4,500,000 tons; Japan, 5,000,000 tons; Australasia, 6,000,000 tons; China, Formosa, Indo-China, Dutch East Indies, Borneo and Eastern Siberia, 4,250,000 tons; British Columbia, 1,000,000 tons; Natal and Transvaal (whose outputs are available for the Indian ocean), 1,750,000 tons; Chili, 500,000 tons; total 25,000,000 tons; exports from the United Kingdom to east of the Cape of Good Hope and west of Cape Horn, 1,700,000 tons; making a grand total of consumption, 24,700,000 tons, or say 25,000,000 tons.

"The future of these different sources of supply is, of course, largely a matter of speculation. One thing is certain, that not only are many of the markets which were formerly open to British coal owners, now closed to them, but in many cases the countries which were their customers are now competing with them. India has now practically ceased to buy from us, and its output is rapidly increasing. In the article which we have mentioned it is said: 'We should not be surprised if within the next five years, so actively though quietly, is the enterprise being prosecuted, the total is equal to that of Japan and Australasia put together, and the importance of this prospect cannot be gainsaid. Indian coal is particularly well adapted for steam raising, and some of the Assam coal is said to be quite as good as the best English steam. It is all a matter of price, however, and coal can be mined in India at not much more than half the average cost in Great Britain. With good quality and her prime cost is extremely probable Indian coal will in the near future dominate the eastern markets."

JAPANESE COMPETITION.—"Japanese competition in the coal market need not be greatly feared, as the coal deposits of the country are not very extensive, and the rapid development of industry in Japan has absorbed the greater part of the coal which has been raised; in fact, it is so scarce now that prices have increased abnormally. If, however, we look to Siberia and China, we see great possibilities in coal production. An American commission examined the deposits on the line of the Trans-Siberian railway, and reported that they had discovered about fifty groups of workable coal. The Amour Valley especially was reported to be very rich. It is computed that the output in Eastern Siberia is now about 2,000,000 tons per annum; but whatever it is, it renders Russia independent of both Japanese, Australian and British supplies. When we turn to China, with its immense resources, we are almost bewildered at the possibilities of industry in that part of the world.

The article to which we have referred expresses the opinion that 'in the dim and distant future, it is certain that China and India will be the two great coal producers of the eastern world, as today the United Kingdom and the United States are those of the western world. Already we hear of the formation of a British syndicate which has obtained a concession of a coal field in the province of Shan-si, 200 miles and 40 miles wide. By its side are vast iron deposits of brown hematite and spathic iron ore and an abundance of limestone. The development of such a coal field gives the opportunity for a great deal of speculation regarding the evolution of industry in the far East and its effect on economic and industrial conditions in Great Britain."

ITS SILVER JUBILEE.

Observed by Robert Burns Lodge of Odd Fellows Last Night—History of the Organization Was Recited.

Robert Burns Lodge of Odd Fellows celebrated its silver jubilee with an entertainment and banquet last night in Odd Fellows' hall, Wyoming avenue. It was organized on October 30, 1873. Last night was the nearest Tuesday night to the date of the anniversary and the celebration was held then because Tuesday nights are its meeting nights.

An interesting recapitulation of its history was read by Secretary George F. Millet, showing what success has been its portion in these twenty-five years. It started out with twenty charter members and has since initiated three hundred and seventy-three, and admitted by card twenty-seven others, making a total of four hundred and twenty taken into the lodge. At present the number in good standing is one hundred and sixty-three. Of the four hundred and twenty taken into the lodge, twenty-five are dead and two hundred and fifty-seven have come non-members for one cause or another. What the members regard with pride is the financial statement. The large sum of $2,347.89 has been laid into the treasury and not one penny went astray. The sum of $16,321.50 has been paid out for relief in cases of sickness; to the widows of members has been paid the sum of $494.14; orphans of members have been paid to alleviate their distress the sum of $400; and for burying the dead has been paid the sum of $752. For special relief $274.41 has been expended. The total of all such disbursements is $14,257.05, and at the present time there is invested and in the treasurer's hands the amount of $11,134.82.

W. S. Ward was chairman of the jubilee celebration. It was attended by the members and their wives and families. The entertainment was opened by Mr. Ward with an introductory address, in which he had welcome and briefly spoke of the happy occasion first called them together. Captain Moir was the speaker. He went along in a happy vein on the subject of Odd Fellowship and related an interesting synopsis of the lodge from its inception. He deemed it a great honor and a happy pleasure to have been with the lodge all of these years and hoped it would continue to prosper.
