

PHILADELPHIA IS MOISTENED Heavy Rain Storm Interferes with the Jubilee.

ARRIVAL OF M'KINLEY

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—President McKinley arrived here at noon today, but instead of finding the city in the midst of the enjoyment of its peace celebration he found a dreary, desolate condition of affairs and many thousands of disappointed citizens and visitors in the throes of disappointment on account of the interruption of the jubilee exercises in consequence of a prevailing rainstorm.

Early in the day the citizens' jubilee committee met at the mayor's office and very quickly concluded to abandon the day's programme and to postpone the parade until Friday.

There were many thousands of visitors in the city who came to witness the parade and the disappointment to them, as well as to the citizens themselves, was keen.

The special train bearing the president and party over the Pennsylvania railroad from Washington reached the city at noon.

The party was met at the station by a reception committee and escorted to the Bellevue hotel, which will be the home of the party during their visit.

COMMITTEE OF LADIES. Mrs. McKinley and the other ladies of the party were taken in charge by a committee of ladies consisting of Mrs. Cornelius Stevenson, Mrs. Governor Hastings, Mrs. May Warwick and Miss Annie Thomson, daughter of President Thomson, of the Pennsylvania railroad.

General and Mrs. Hobart arrived from Washington a half an hour earlier than the president and were escorted to the Hotel Stratford, where quarters had been reserved for them.

The president remained in his rooms this afternoon, and to his eyes the city given a reception at the Union League.

There was a great crowd in and about Broad street station when the presidential party arrived, but the police kept a clear passage-way, through which Mr. McKinley and his companions walked without difficulty.

A squad of mounted police was in waiting outside the station and escorted the carriages of the party to the hotel.

General Miles was accompanied by Brigadier General Gilmer, Lieutenant Colonel Allen and other members of his staff, and Captain A. Paget, of the British navy, who went through the entire war as a spectator for his government.

SOLDIERS ARRIVE. All the regular and volunteer soldiers, who are to take part in tomorrow's military parade of the peace jubilee, are now in the city, with the exception of the Sixteenth Pennsylvania which is to arrive early tomorrow morning.

At midnight the rain had entirely ceased and there was a clear sky. The air is cool and all indications point to a bright October day for tomorrow's parade.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—President McKinley was this evening tendered a dinner and reception at the Union League. The dinner was entirely informal and was given by the board of directors of the league.

At the end of the dinner the original banner of the Union League with a number of other flags were brought into the dining room by an escort of the veteran corps under Colonel Theodore E. Weldersheim and created considerable enthusiasm.

At the reception which followed there were fully four thousand guests. The crowd was so great that the president was not even asked to say anything. He stood in one of the side rooms, the line of visitors passing and shaking him by the hand.

Naval Constructor Hobson was among those who shook hands with the president and he received a kindly word of greeting.

The president is much pleased with the preparations of the jubilee celebration and was amazed at the magnificence of the arrangements therefore. He will tomorrow review the military parade, and he expressed his regret that he was unable to attend the postponed civic parade on Friday.

It is learned that the president has had with him at all times since leaving Washington a bodyguard of three detectives. The president, however, said tonight that he never felt so safe as he did while in Philadelphia.

The only speech made by the president was a brief one as he was leaving the Union League shortly before 11 o'clock. A tremendous crowd of people had gathered in the street outside the building.

A moment later four of the crew of the Merrimac came from the building and were presented to the crowd. They received most tumultuous greetings.
