PRESIDENT REVIEWS THE TROOPS

Peace Jubilee Military and Naval Day Exercises.

HONORS FOR THE BRAVE

The Heroes of Battles on Land and Sea Are Greeted with Continuous Applause as They Pass Before President McKinley on the Grand Review-- Many of the Distinguished Characters of the War Are in Line. President McKinley Delighted with the Fine Appearance of the Philadelphia, Oct. 27.-For three hours in-chief of the United States army and navy, saw his victorious sons pass in review before him.

It was military and naval day of the great peace jubilee. Twenty-five thousand men marched in the most brilliant and spectacular pageant the country has witnessed in many years.

Within a semi-circular enclosure of the big reviewing stand in the magnificent court of honor, the president stood erect and uncovered throughout the entire procession. As these legions pressed past, his face was set but not stern, and in his eyes was a gleam of satisfaction. From his steadfast gaze one might have fancied him listening to president in their own way. Some sounds other than those which struck on the common ear-sounds of deeper import, telling the meaning of this glit-tering panorama. Behind those martial tunes he might have heard the music of cannon volleys, the sound of falling cities and the dying shricks of a decadent people. But over these and lifted out of servitude and cruelty by the work of these embattled hosts. Yet the central theme and motive of it all was one of joy and pride in the men and their work and the nation of which they are. This was the true significance of the event. Here and there, when some par- shell which had become fixed in the ticularly renowned body of troops marched by the president smilingly waved his hat and motioned to the crowds across the way to cheer the men who were their heroes as well as

Mrs. McKinley viewed the procession. from a small stand on the top of the conservatory of the Lippincott mansion, immediately behind the larger stand where her eminent husband stood. She, too, was not chary of applause.

There was not an untoward feature of the day. The weather was tonic autumn-sunlit, gusty. The vast crowds were handled with commendable skill and whatever accidents occurred were of the most trivial character.

THE PRESIDENT'S FLAG

Over the president's head hung a canopy bearing on its face the coat of arms of the United States and surmounted by the new president's flag. for the first time unfurled in the United States. The flag was only recently adopted by the war department. To the left of the stand was the coat of arms of Philadelphia.

During the parade the president was surrounded by a small party, consisting of Vice President Hobart, Secretary of War Alger, Secretary of Agri- here today by the Nerwegian fruit steam culture Wilson, Postmaster General Smith, Private Secretaries Porter and ports that he sighted the two small boats Cortelyou. Mayor Warwick and a few at daylight October 23, ten miles south-members of the jubilee committee. West of Castle island, in the windward members of the jubilee committee.

Mr, McKinley arose early this morn ing and after a light breakfast, taken in his Bellevue apartments, he and his party were ariven in open carriages along the route of the parade, about seven miles in length. The drive was of course marked by incessant applause from the crowds. While driving up Broad street the party passed General Miles and his staff, who were riding to the place of formation. The moment the general's sword made its salutatory sweep, the president arose in his carriage and raised his hat, holding it aloft until they had passed. Reurning to the Bellevue, the presidential party was escorted by a squadron of the First City troop of cavalry across Broad street to the reviewing stand. They had been preceded a few minutes by Generals Shafter, Lawton and 'haffee with their aides and a party of ladies.

Ten minutes later at 11.25 o'clock the platoon of the emergency corps, which held the head of the line, reach ed the stand, and from then until 2.30 clock the sailors and soldiers tramped on in splendid marching order, every sword raised in salute, every gun presented.

HEROES IN LINE.

Many illustrious heroes were in line, but there was little partiality displayed in the kind or quantity of enthusiasm accorded them.

Major General Miles, as chief marrode at the front, immediately behind the emergency corps until he reached his special reviewing stand at Broad and York streets, the northern end of the route. Here he dismounted and from the stand watched the men

General "Joe" Wheeler rode behind the governors, his gray head bared for some minutes before and after the presidential stand was reached and bowing repeatedly to the president's waving hat and the applause of others of the party and the people generally. General Sumner, Captain "Bob" Evans, Commodore Philip, Captain Sigsbee, Colonel Huntingdon, with his marines of Guantanamo fame, all received tumultuous greeting, but, after all perhaps the loudest ovation was that given Hobson and his Merrimac They rode on a tally-ho, and as Liverpool

they reached the reviewing stand all arose, faced the president and bowed their bared heads. So far as any one body of men was concerned, perhaps the Twenty-first regiment infantry, "the president's own," received the greatest tribute. They marched three hundred strong under Colonel McKibbin, and the memory of their valorous deed at the storming of San Juan hill stirred the people to a thunderous clamor of applause. These are the men who, with comrades dropping all around them in the flame and fury of a Spanish attack, waded walst deep through water, forcing their formen back and singing "The Star Spangled Banner" as they fought.

With them marched the "Fighting Musicians" of the regiment, the men who, in the thick of the combat, flung their instruments from them and made music with the guns snatched from their fallen brothers. There are only twenty left of the original thirty-eight bandmen. The others fell in the fight.
The Twenty-first carried the colors presented to them by Mrs. McKinley. who called them "the president's own," and also those given by a lady of New York city.

HONORS FOR COLORED FIGHTERS. The Tenth cavalry, colored, were disnounted and to them the president repeatedly flourished his hat. Huntingdon's marines, who made the first hostile landing on Cuban soil, were immediately preceded by the Marine band. With them trotted along a kid brought from the topics, and arrayed in glowing colors.

Of course, the highest degree of local enthusiasm was bestowed upon Colonel today William McKinley, commander- Hulings and his Sixteenth Pennsylvania regiment. His finnk movement in the fight at Coamo, Porto Rico, had not been forgotten. The presidential party joined in the applause with equal zest. The sailors were no less well re-ceived than the soldiers. There were lines of Jackies from the Texas, Glouester, Marbiehead, New Orleans, Topeka, Mayflower, with a few scattering men from the Yosemite, Yankee and other ships. The rear of the line was held by the Grand Army of the Republic and their allied military organizations. As these ancient warriors filed past with none too lusty step, they caluted the waved their hats, others timorously raised their hands in the conventional way, while several companies halted, turned, and, fronting the chief executive, presented the tattered old battle flags. One of the posts carried a battery of two guns, and saluted with a shot from each as the stand was louder he might have heard peals of passed. The president responded with praise from a helpless, infant nation a sweep of his hat and continuous bows.

Between two of the Grand Army Republic posts rode in a carriage Harry L. MacNeal, who had charge of a gun on the Brooklyn and who crawled out over the side of the ship while under fire, to extract a fragment of muzzle.

Passing the presidential stand the troops marched in "company front" formation, in three-step cadence, onethird faster than the regular time. In nearly every instance the was almost faultless.

As the last line of soldiers and the the stand, the crowd broke through the ropes and made a rush towards the president's enclosure. He merely bowed his acknowledgement for the cheering and then withdrew to the Mrs. J. Lundas Lippincott, immediately back of the stand. Here the party took luncheon and shortly afterwards the president retired to his hotel to spend in rest the time remaining until the Clover club dinner and the Academy of Music reception tonight.

THE DREYFUS

CASE AGAIN

HEARING BEGUN ON THE QUES-TION OF REOPENING IT.

Precautions Against a Popular Demonstration-Admission to the there. Court Room Only by Ticket-Zola Represented-Reporter Bard Opens the Proceedings.

Paris, Oct. 27,-The court of cassation, which is to decide upon the question of reopening the case of Alfred Dreyfus, who is alleged to have been falsely convicted of selling important. nilitary plans to agents of a foreign power, opened at noon today. The no demonstration around the palace of justice. The gates, however, were closed as a matter of precaution and only ticket holders were admitted. The w spectators arounds the palace were kept moving by the police, and inside the building munfcipal guards were stationed in all the corridors leading to the court room.

Maitre Labori, who was counsel for M. Zola during the latter's famous trial, was seated among the lawyers guez. occupying the first rom. Madame Dreyfus, wife of the prisoner, was provided with a seat in a corner. Sh was represented by Maitre Mornard.

The Dreyfus appeal case was called immediately after the opening of the court. Reporter Bard opened the proceedings by referring to the excitement and scandals caused by the case even before the appeal for a revision of the trial was lodged. He then reviewed the history of the case from the arrest of Dreyfus, and said his condemnation was for one of the crimes which inspire universal horror, and it struck one of those in whom the country had the most confidence.

Continuing. Mr. Bard spoke of the efforts made to obtain a revision of the case, referred to the denunciation of Major Esterhazy and reviewed Mmc. Dreyfus' appeal. This appeal, he said, was based on the assumption that the bordereau was written by Major Es-He then pointed out that there were susplcious facts which justify the request for the revision. Mme. Dreyfus contended that her husband did not write the bordereau, which all the experts reported he did write. The court, therefore, would have to examine these facts and decide whether a revision was justified.

HENRY'S CONFESSION. M. Bard added that the appeal for a revision was decided upon in consequence of the late Lieutenant Colonel Henry's confession that he had forged a document in the case, but this forgery was committed in 1896 and could not alone be regarded as ground for a revision or for an annulment of the judgment rendered in 1894.

Nevertheless, M. Bard then said Lieutenant Colonel Henry had committed forgery, his evidence crushing against Dreyfus, and, he continued, the evidence of a forger is open body of police behind them passed to suspicion. There was, therefore, the presumption of innocence, based upon fresh fact, which led to the appeal for a revision of the case, and there was also ground to ask whether another new fact has not been brought to light rear of the stand to the residence of and if Dreyfus was really the author of the bordereau and note written to Major Esetrhazy and found in the apartment of Mile. Pays, in which the writer asked what he should do respecting the bordereau.

M. Bard next read Colonel Du Paty de Clam's report of the arrest of Dreyfus, then a captain of French artillery doing staff duty, in which the colonel said that Dreyfus, while writing to his dictation, "betrayed intense excitement." "But," M. Bard added, amid the surprise of his hearers, "the photograph taken of this writing does not give the slightest indication that Dreyfus was laboring under excitement." Dreyfus, M. Bard also said, denied to Colonel Du Paty de Clam that he ever had relations, directly or indirectly, with foreign powers.

Colonel Du Paty de Clam's report further showed that Dreyfus had to write incriminating documents in ten different ways, sitting and standing, with and without gloves, and with ordinary and broad-pointed pens. The belief is general tonight that the court of cassation will pronounce neither for revision nor for annullment of the decision in the Dreyfus case, as either course would entail awkward onsequences. To avoid these it is expected the court will decide that as the affair now presents itself there has been no treason and therefore the condemnation pro nounced upon Captain Dreyfus by the court-martial cannot be upheld. ROBBERS SENTENCED.

Missouri Boys Will Serve Ten Years in the Prison.

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 27.-In the criminal court today Herbert Donovan, Alonzo Artcourn, Charles Cooke, James Hathaway and William Hathaway, were sentenced to the penitentiary for ten years for robbing a Burlington passenger train near St. Joseps, the evening of Aug. 11.

The robbers are mere boys and of good families. On this account the railroad and express officials consented to the assessment of the minimum fine upon their plea of guilty. The robbery was successfully executed but no booty was secured. After throwing the safe, containing a large amount of money from the train, the boys became frightened and ran away without opening it. They proceeded to their homes in this city and next day James Hathaway made a confession and all were arrested.

I cannot forego making acknowledgment to this far famed club for the permission it has granted me to meet with It has been so gratifying to me to participate with the people of the city of It was a pageant the like of and declare that the boat was not more which I do not believe has been seen since than half a mile from shore. It is the close of the great civil war, when the thought the St. Peter lost her rudder army of Grant, Sherman and Sheridan and that the heavy seas caused her to spring a leak. The St, Peter was bound Porter gave the great review in the capfrom Oswego to Toledo with 700 tons no more fitting place to have a patriotic celebration than in this great city which witnessed the first consecration of liberty and of the republic. As I stood on the great reviewing stand witnessing the soldlers and sailors passing by my heart was filled only with gratitude to the God of batties who has so favored us, and gratitude to the brave soldiers and sailors who had won such signal victories on land and on sea, and had given a new mean-ing to American valor.

It has been especially gratifying to me at the Jefferson hospital. He had to participate not only with the people of swallowed forty-five grains of mor- Philadelphia, but with the people of the phine, after which he shot himself in the head. APPLAUSE FOR MILES.

When he finished his speech the president left the hall to go to the reception at the Academy of Music. As he passed from the room General Miles entered. The head of the army received an ovation as he pressed through the crowd to his seat, next to General Shafter. The latter arose as General Miles approached and, reaching out his hand, cordially greeted his chief. The public exhibition of feeling between the two gentlemen was greeted with almost deafening applause. General Alger responded briefly on schalf of the army, and Commodore Frans was called upon as a representative of the navy. He thrilled his bearers with a simply-told story of the battle of Santiago, filled with personal reminiscences.

General Miles made an extended address, in which he paid an eloquent tribute to the valor of the American oldier and safter.

At the Academy of Music the president held an informal reception for two With Secretaries Alger and hours. Wilson he stood on the stage and shook hands with a long line of people, who cassed in one door and out another. There was no speech-making and after a light luncheon had been served in the foyer, the president was escorted back to his hotel and shortly after wards, at half past eleven o'clock, the party returned to Washington.

COL. STONE'S WELCOME

> Rousing Reception Tendered at Altoona.

CHARACTERISTIC SPEECH

The Speaker Tells His Hearers of the Purposes of the Campaign, but Refrains from Abusing His Opponents-He Believes That the War with Spain Is Not Yet Over.

Altoona, Pa., Oct. 27,-The Republican candidate for governor, Colonel W. A. Stone, was tendered a rousing reception on his arrival here tonight by thousands of shopmen and veterans of the Civil war. He was escorted to the opera house by a committee of representative Republicans headed by a band, where he spoke to a crowded bouse. In his address he said;

I am here to preach the doctrine of the Republican party and not to assail the characters of my opponents as votes cannot be made in that way, I am not here to preach the issues of those who are opposed to me but the issues in my judg-ment of this campaign. He scored mud-slinging by referring to the ourning of the capitol, the rose propagating house and the disputes arising from niting up the Grace church. It is charged that I have not familiarized myself with what the last legislature did and what I did not do. They may have done wrong in passing bills but that is past and I am now getting ready to study the next legislature. The Democrats are fighting behind the screen of reform to defeat the Republican party.

WAR WITH SPAIN.

They say the war with Spain is over, but it is not. It is only over for a short time. The commissioners at Paris have done nothing towards effecting a treaty and won't do anything until after the Nevember election. They say that this campaign has nothing to do with national issues but I say it has because the whole world studies the movements of the No-vember elections of our great country. Do you suppose that if Jenks is elected that the Democrats will not oppose the policy of our president? I tell you they will. The people should hold up his hands n the war with a foreign power and not bow his head with disappointment, Democratic party seeks with the clock of reform to cover up the grinning skele-ton of free silver and free trade, but we can see the bony fingers and the ema-ciated figure of deceit, vice and trick-Should I be elected I will try to fill the office with honor and do my duty to this
