CORBETT IS DEFEATED

those who had not made early provision had to pay exorbitant prices to the wide awake speculators, who snapped up the best seats early in the game. Tickets for seats in the im-mediate vicinity of the ring brought fabulous prices tonight. The original costs of these paste boards was twen-ty dollars each, but then twice that sum could not purchase one of them in two instances they brought $100 apiece. The other tickets, costing from $5 to $15, brought prices increased two and three fold and the club management did not put any of the $3 admission tickets on sale. The anxious sports who clamored at the entrances gladly paid $5 and in many instances $6 for the privilege of standing up at the extreme ends of the building.

The club house is not very well adapted for pugilistic encounters, as it is long and parrow, having been built for an ice skating rink. The ring it pitched in the center of the house and the boxes are built around it. On each each of the box inclosure tier upon tier of chairs are ranged on : gradually inclined structure which very nearly touches the roof of building at both ends. each side of the structure are large length of the house and these elevated places were partitioned into small boxes, which were considered the best of vantage. The view from any part of the building was unobstructed.

The doors of the big building were thrown open shortly after five o'clock. At that early hour hundreds of people were waiting patiently in front of the club house on Lexington avenue. As soon as the first comers passed through the turnstiles others took their places on the outside and this continued for over three hours. The crowds were kept in check by a large force of

While the crowd was a large one, it was never beyond the control of the police and in fact was not as dense as the authorities expected.

Inside the building all was bustle and excitment, but at $ o'clock the house was scarcely half filled. This was easily accounted for by the fact that the big event was not scheduled to take place until about ten o'clock, the helders of coupons for reserved seats were in no hurry to get up town to be cooped up for any unnecessary length of time. The gambling instinct which is a necessary adjunct to all manner of fistic contests was in evidence as soon as the sports began to gather in the boxes.

CORBETT STOCK HIGH. Corbett's stock was always in preference and the odds on the Californian opened at 100 to 80. The betting did not take on as lively a turn as on former occasions when fighters of less note have met in this arena.

So much betting had been done during the last forty-eight hours, however, in the sporting resorts through-out the city that the slackness of the wagering on the spot did not indicate any loss of interest in the heavy weight

A few minutes before 8 o'clock those inside the building heard loud cheering and the word was passed around that some one of importance had arrived. This was true. It was Sharkey | ilege of entering the club house, al up to the club house accompanied by

It's not a good time to cry of prices—art is not measured by dollars and cents. Therefore it's inconsistent to shout "Cheap! book. Cheap!" in the same breath with "Finest and Best." Yet in truth we hold the matter of price as highly important.

There is no sentimentality in our prices-each mark is based on a business percentage of the cost, and the goods cost less than you expect-that's triumph enough, colored handlers. By half past 8 o'clock nearly every sent in the house was occupied. Bankers and brokers were in prominence, lawyers of note and business men, representing nearly every phase of trade, mingled with well known politicians and held animated conversations in close proximity to the ring side. One well known member of the produce exchange took the Sharkey end of one of the largest wagers of the night which was $1,500 to $1,300 or Corbett. Joe Vendig laid the odds on the Californian, The first of the two preliminary bouts was begun at 8.45 o'clock. The principals were two local boxers, Jack Sullivan and Charley Schultz, who were announced to go ten rounds at 135 pounds.

This proved to be a slugging match, utterly devoid of science. It was full of ginger, however, and amused the spectators, who laughed heartily at the clumsy but earnest work of both

The men had hardly shaped them ecives for the seventh round when Schultz put off a straight right hand smash full on Sullivan's jaw which put him down and practically out The referee, Charley White, then humanely stopped the bout and declared Schultz the winner.

KID M'COY IN DISGUISE. During the progress of this bout ther was a commotion in a box at the ringside. Kid McCoy, the pugilist who is to meet Peter Maher at Coney Island next month, had gained admission to the arena disguised with false black whiskers and moustache. Some days ago Tom O'Rourke, the manage of the club, forbade McCoy the priv though the "Kid" had been engaged by a morning newspaper to write the story of the big fight. A careful watch was kept by the men on the door so that he could not get in, but he cleverly baffled the vigilance with his disguise As soon as he took his seat at the ringside McCoy was recognized and he removed his hirsute appendages.

Detectives Sergeant Armstrong or dered McCoy to leave the building, but the "Kid" refused. Then Armstrong and Detective Mulholland urged Mc Coy to leave and caught him by the arms, at the same time pushing him through the crowd. Corbett's backers forced the price of the Californian to $100 to $70 just as it was learned that the ex-champion had reached the club house and was in his dressing room. At 20 minutes after 9 o'clock a buzz of excitement ran through the build-ing and Tom Sharkey pushed his way through the betting crowd. He was attired in a light blue dressing gown underneath which he had an American flag wound around his waist for a belt. He was accompanied by his manager, Tom O'Rourke, John T.

Announcer Charley Hurvey called the attention of the on-lookers to the fact that the principals wished them to refrain from smoking and immediately all cigars which were being industri-ously puffed were trodden under foot most willingly.

The crowd was beginning to be uneasy at Corbett's delay in making his appearance, when some one in the gallery shouted: "Three cheers for Shar-key." These were given with a will and repeated all over the house. Corbett did not reach the ringside until 19.38 o'clock, just 15 minutes later than Sharkey, At 19.48 the men were introduced by Announcer Charley Harvey, Sharkey's name being mentioned first, and Tom had to bow repeatedly in recognition of the cheers which greeted him. The ovation given to Corbett was more demonstrative, cheers lasting over a

A WILD CHEER. There was a wild cheer as he was seen making his way to the ringside. When he reached the steps leading up to the ring Corbett stopped for a mo-ment to shake hands with some friends. Then he climbed nimbly through the ropes and rested his arms on them for a few seconds, during which time he smiled across the ring at O'Rourke who stood in front of Sharkey. Corbett was enveloped in a dark olive ombed and brushed. His seconds were Charley White, George Considine, Jack McVey and John Considine, of Detroit, acted as his timekeeper. Both men had their choice of the sets of gloves. Corbett selected his pair which were made for him in California. They were a pair of typical fighting gloves, being just shaped to the clinched fist, whereas Sharkey's were the long tapering glove usually donned by boxers,

They were nearly an inch and a half longer than his opponent's which would give him an opportunity of forcing the hair in the gloves away from the knuckles. The gloves were of the regulation weight of five ounces as provided by the Horton law, Corbett wore white trunks and a red, white and green sash, which his sec-onds took off as soon as he stood erect, Sharkey wore green splits, held by a belted American flag. There was a long confab between the principals, their seconds and the referee, after which the men retired to their cor-ner. After having agreed not to hit in clinches or in breakaways and that they would step back when ordered to break away, everything was in order for the bout to begin,
