"Rupert of Hentzau."

Mr. Hackett and associates who prosented "Rupert of Hentzau" at the Lycum last night must have been well pleased with the reception their work received. The tributes of appreciation would have been gratefully received even by a Mansfield, for the audience was large and representative and the applause honest and fervid. It was a sincere tribute to the highly creditable manner in which the company presented Mr. Hope's dramatization of his novel "Rupert of Hentzau." a sequel

It was Mr. Hackett's first visit to Scranton and howas undeniably gratified ey his cordial reception. After the duel which closed the inst scene of the third net the applause was especially vigoroue and when the company, characters in the stone and finally the star had of gracefully acknowledged the tributes, alls for a speech from Mr. Hackett were numerous. He modestly responded, thanking the audience in the name of Mr. Hope, Mr. Frohman, the company and himself. He said just enough in "Rupert of Hentzau." It is so apparand no more. In his speech-making was as judicious as in his acting. Mr. Hackett's work last night was exellent throughout and he is hereafter essured of a large following in this ity. His impersonation of the prevish,
