The outspoken letter of Mayor Harding, which appeared in the Gazette last evening, as a reply to a column of gross from the pen of Paul Bohan, meets with the approval of every good citizen, and it has done more to bring around a good feeling for him and his administration than anything else that has occurred since his election. It has the true ring of honesty and uprighteousness in its lines and will result in burying in oblivion future complaints of malcontents, who of late have been numerous in this city. The mayor has been a much-abused man, but many of his former persecutors will now be his best friends.
