PRACTICAL SERMON OF REV. DR. GIFFIN DELIVERED IN ELM PARK CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

His Topic Was "Our Citizens' Duty to Our City"—What Our City Needs Above Everything Else is a Man—One Who Has the Power to Lead—We Do Not Need New Policies as Badly as We Need a Good Manager to Enforce the Policies Now in Vogue.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Giffin delivered in Elm Park church last night a discourse in which he viewed the great need of Scranton. It was supplementary to a talk he gave two weeks ago on "Our Citizens' Duty to Our City," which was very attractive and much enjoyed by the large audience which heard it. His remarks last evening were not quite so pointed and exciting as on the previous occasion. His text was from Isaiah XIII: 12: "I will make a man more precious than pure gold."

An over-seer looking over a line of applicants for a job would say "This is the sort of a man." That seems to be the condition of our city now. It is such a serious matter that we do not wish to have a man more precious than pure gold. The words of the text refer to a death of the warrior sort. It indicates a deplorable condition in a military state, in our day and place we need less soldiers and more statesmen.

Some female agitators suggest that the lack of male side of the race will not improve the condition of the woman. Can rule better than the men have ruled. We should be ashamed of them if they could not. Certain it is that we can have no improvement in the conduct of public affairs until we get that improved conductor—the right man.

The doctor insisted on the greatness of a real man, one who has the full proportions and thought, one such full specimen would shine in our city's firmament like a sun. He attempted in general terms to indicate what he meant by this one of such importance to our municipal management and quoted as indicating him, the declaration of Frederick of Prussia when he learned that the great William Pitt had been given the premiership in England. "At last England has brought forth a man." That product our city needs above all other things. His enumeration of the features of this important item in our city development was as follows:

MUST BE A LEADING SPIRIT.
First—He must be a leading spirit. If he is not pushing he will be a waste of a bushel. Between leading and leading he drew a distinction. He declared bosses were not a recent growth. Self choice depends always have been when the people want the best. In Athens his name was Cleon. In New York, Tweed, Croker. In Pennsylvania—a question hanging in the scales. In Scranton, Cleon was the name. The Greeks declared "that is not a city which is owned by one man."

England broke up the pocket borough system when she wanted the best. What she carried about by the exalted manager. We do need a man big enough to be manager. We are running after petty self ambition, not to the best of our city. We are running after petty self ambition, not to the best of our city. We are running after petty self ambition, not to the best of our city.

CALLS FOR THE BEST.
The speaker here put himself with them in every-day work. But government calls for the supreme samples of our race. The doctor scored the worthlessness of the pendents to the man as he denounced their readiness to accept for public positions these fragments, a dozen of whom put together could not make one full, complete man. He made a wide distinction between a man and a full grown man of our race.

His third and fourth lines in the portrait he was drawing were liberality, which he defined as being open to best and truest ideas, and the lasting power; the ability to decline to be tired or soured out. He described the pulpy sort who take new shape under each touch and the brittle sort who break under the slight jar. He called for a man with back bone and not simply a knotted string for the spinal column; one who is firm grained and cannot be pulled apart.

After another further discussion of the man, he asked "Why does Scranton need him?" and answered it as follows:

Because the civic salvation of all places has been and must be in some one about whose personality the reforming elements of the community are gathered. Every business is seeking for the top man at each taller than his fellows. It is the height of the supreme individual and, a fact of the times to say they will move up to a higher position whether they have the lead or not. Those Scranton citizens, however, who are the need of the hour. At the moment of writing the text of his discourse and then like a match lighted the mass will be in flames and fused into a grand spirit.

NEED OF A MANAGER.
We do not need new policies altogether. Our city's ills are not new. We want the manager for the machinery. We should worry less about the machine and do not let it hinder us. We should be on the lookout for him, the man with a head and heart in him. To desire him is one way to develop him. The unappointed followed the anticipation. If you could get that man or top in our city, we could soon be one of the top cities of the land.

It is to be feared we do not want this man; although we need him, judged by our selections do not. It might be if he came we would reject him. The friend of the people has felt this bitterness. If he proposed a situation in which dwarf righteousness might be seen above. At other ways on the cross. If we do want him let us prepare to give him a welcome. And until he does come may we not pray in the words of the psalmist: "Oh God, for a man with a heart, head, hand, and foot."

Like some of the simple, great ones, go on. Forever and forever! One still, strong man in a blatant land? Whatever they call him will sure find Aristotle, and Aristotle will sure find him. Who can rule and who dare not rule? We have a feeling that that man is in our midst, not seeing his opportunity. Oh if he would step forth with the evident nomination of character, greater than genius, paying with total concentration of himself to this task. Here am I to be servant of my townsmen. Here am I to be their guide and their leader. Here am I to be their guide and their leader. Here am I to be their guide and their leader.
