DOCKSTADER'S SENSIBILITY.

How a Quaker Audience Out West Hoodooed a Funny Feature.

A few years ago when Lew Dockstader was at the head of his own minstrel organization, he opened the season at Dayton, O., where the company rehearsed. The show really opened at the little town of Richmond, Ind., made up principally of Quakers, sixty miles distant. They went there to "try it on the dog," as the saving is, Dockstader is nothing if not original. He had studied out a specialty which he called "Beau Brummel." He believed it would make a hit, as it gave the comedian the advantage of being exceedingly funny. As a gen-eral thing Dockstader never makes a mistake in his ideas of what fun really is in the minstrel line. The costume he designed for this monologue was a novelty in its way and not of the beaten line. It was quite a costly affair too. He had gone to great expense in getting out special posters for this feature and he rather prided himself on the fact that it would be a glorious He is a man of strong impulses, however, and is easily cast down when things don't go just right. The premier presentation of the show at Richmond proved this beyond all reasonable dispute. Lew was, ourse, the bright, particular star, but he had no conception of the solemn character of the audience gathered on the evening in question. As stated, they were of Quaker descent and not given to any manifestations of approval or disgust at stage entertainments. There were a good many things to worry the popular cemedian on the occasion and on that account he was not in the best of humor. He didn't pay particular attention to the apparent silence of the people in front of the footlights. In fact he didn't notice it at all until he made his own appearance in his new character of 'Beau Brummel. When he thought he ought to get a hand or two there was profound peace. He did his best to wake up his auditors but all to no purpose. They preserved their stolid equanimity to the last. He left the stage without a murmur of applicase following him. This was something new for him and he couldn't understand it. He was the worst humored man in the show that night. A few friends who knew a good thins when they saw it, and had come down from Dayton to see the opening entertainment, among them three or four newspaper critics, couldn't understand why in the next night at Dayton, after the show, and especially Dockstuder's new feature, had been given a tine send the things given. The truth of the matter was that Dockstader conceived the idea that it was a frost and he could never be induced to repeat it. He burned his costume and whenever any allusion was made to the character he would reply with a grean 'the memory of that first night put a hoodee in it." It is unnecessary to say that he has never returned to the sombre town of Richmond, Ind., since.

ERIN'S FATE IS IN THE JURY'S HANDS

ACCUSED MADE A COMPLETE DENIAL OF CHARGES.

Called a Number of Witnesses to Prove His Previous Good Character-His Little Daughter Also Took the Stand in His Defense. Judge Edwards' Charge to the Jury Was an Admirable Effort-Burg-Some Queer Features.

Twelve men retired at 3.30 yesterday afternoon to decide the fate of Jacob Erin, of North Scranton. At adjourning hour there was no sign of an early agreement.

Erin is charged with having assaulted Jennie Shimer, the 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shimer, who were neighbors of the Erins. The case was called Tuesday afternoon and practically all of the testimony for the ommonwealth was heard that day.

When court opened yesterday morning Dr. D. H. Jenkins and Dr. G. O. Caldwell were called by the common-wealth. They examined the girl after the assaults and testified to her condition. What they said went to corroborate her story.

The commonwealth rested with that and Attorney A. A. Vosburg opened for the defense. He stated that his client is guiltless of the charges brought against him. They were preferred because he would not give Mrs. Frederick Johnson 350 and ten pounds of meat a month.

Erin went on the stand and denied absolutely having committed the offenses charged against him. He said he put up a swing near his house for the children of the neighborhood and frequently played and romped with them there. His conduct was always of the most innocent nature. He then denied specifically each of the offenses Jennie Shimer charged him with in her

Dr. Herman Bessey testified that the child's nervous system would not be in the condition it is now if she had suffered as she said she did and afterwards William Lintner, P. J. Jordan, John Michael, John Schroeder, Louis Webb and George Burkel testified to

They were not out of her sight at any time and nothing of the kind described occurred.

The closing addresses to the jury were made by District Attorney Jones and Attorney Vosburg. Judge Edwards' charge to the jury was a model of what a clear, comprehensive, un-biased charge should be. He closed by reminding the jury of the importance of the case he was about to place in their hands. The faucets in all the whiskey barrels had been opened and a large quantity of whiskey allowed to run on the Receipts on file in the office were destroyed and two dollars worth of revenue stamps torn into small bits. The intruders then went to the barn in the rear of the premises and carried away two sets of harness. To give further evidence of their malicious spirit they cut the top off a new covered wagon which was purchased a short time before by Bosak.

Constable Jesse Morris testified that the men now on trial were suspected of the burglary and he went to their boarding hause a few hours after the discovery of the deed, and in a bed occupied by one of the defendants, found a bottle of Mum's extra dry. The wine was produced in court yesterday and was identified by Bosak as part of his stock. After a hearing the men were committed to the county jail, One of them told him they would never find the harness taken from Hosak's barn. #### LOOKS FOR A BOOM.

Secretary Atherton, of the Board of Trade, Very Enthusiastic About the Prospects for the Electric City for This Year.

Scranton, this year," said Secretary Atherton of the Board of Trade yesterday, in discussing the work that the board and particularly its energetic manufacturing committee is doing. "I never saw so many good things coming this way. It used to be that we had to go out for them, and offer them all kinds of inducements to bring them here. Now they come to us uninvited and with very reasonable demands in the way of inducements. The generous and very judicious advertising this city board of trade is having its effect." This morning at 10 o'clock, Mr. Atherton states, representatives of the board of trade will meet with representatives of a big manufacturing concern which has under consideration the advisability of moving its plant from Trenton to this city. It is something new to Scranton in the way of a manufactory and if secured will be one of the biggest industries of the city. Five other big manufacturing conerns have made propositions to locate here and, it is thought three of them at least will be secured,

City Clerk Martin T. Lavelle Will Ask to Have His Allowance Cut Down to the Extent of $100 - Chief Gurrell Wants Fifteen New Officers of Diamond Dyes and color it over. I and Will Insist on a New Station House for Providence - Chief Engineer Phillips Has a Suggestion to Make.

Nearly all the estimates of expenses for the various departments of the city government have been received by City Controller Robinson. City Clerk Lavelle, who a few years ago brought the dime museum magnates down upon him in droves by refusing to entertain a proposition to in-crease his salary, will startle the estimates committee this year by asking to have $100 cut off the usual allowance for running his department. He finds that he can get along with $100 for incidentals, for which $200 was allowed last year.

The board of tax revision and appeals will ask for $500 extra for new maps. Street Commissioner O'Boyle will suggest an additional allowance of $5,000 for crushed stone, it being his intention to use stone instead of dirt in making repairs to roads in the suburban wards. The board of health will ask for $3,200 to pay for the crematory lot, which at present is costing a snug sum each year in interest. An increase of $300 in the secretary's talary will also be asked for.
