AN ARCTIC RAILROAD.

Sweden and Norway Will Extend It Over the Mountains to Carry Iron Ore.

From the New York Sun. Ther is a great deal of iron in Sweden and some of the largest mines are north of the Artic circle. This is why there is a railroad in the Artic regions, the most northern railroad in the world and also why the road whose northern terminus is now forty-four miles north of the Artic circle is to be extended further north until it penetrates the Artic region 130 miles.

The iron ore found along the Baltle coast of Sweden contains a little too much phosphorus to be easily reduced, and it is going to Germany by the hundreds of thousands of tens to be smelted. Sweden has no coal to smelt it with, and so she sells most of the ore rather than import coal and make iron and its manufactures. There is a good demand for Swedish iron, for it is unsurpassed for the manufacture of mountings, horseshoe nails and many other things. One of the most famous centres of iron mining in Sweden is at Gellivara, north of the Artic circle. It has apparently an inexhaustible supply of ore, and several years ago a railroad was built from Lulea, on the Gulf of Bothnia, to bring the are out of the country. The ore cost at Lulea about $2 a. ton, and the freight to Stettin or West-Mill City, and Minnie innen, daugh- phalia is higher than the cost of the ore because the vessels carrying it have to go north in ballast.

The Gellivar railroad has not been first- rate success, for the reason in town on Wednesday, called here as a witness in the suit of E. S Wheelr's executors vs. L. M. Potter, heard little more than a third of the year, In other words, the ore can be shipped out of the country only about four and Nicholson on Wednesday, staying over a half months in the season. The mountains to the west cut off the beneficent influence of the Gulf Stream drift, which keeps the flords of Norway open the year around. Artic conditions precounty, having served the churches of vail on the east side of the mountains the Baptist denomination at Russell and the result is a very short shipping

So the governments of Norway and and the Luzerne avenue Enptist Sweden have decided to extend the mountains to Ofoten fiord on the Atlantic coast, where vessels may enter in of the year and load un county, has introduced a bill in the with the ore brought from Sweden, It will be the only Arctic rallroad in the world. The western ter-minus at Ofoten will be 130 miles north stitution recommended to us Dr. Hariof the Artic circle, but though much further north it will be in a temperate winter climate when everything to the ast of the mountains is in the grasp of the frost king.

Norway has appropriated nearly $5,-100,000 to build the part of the road ying in her territory and Sweden has made a grant of about $8,000,000 to construct her part of the work.
