IN THE THEATERS

"The Turtle" at the Lyceum.

For months "The Turtle" has been the most talked of play on the boards until finally the very name came to symbolize all that was suggestive and naughty in a theatrical way. The disrobing scene in the second act was referred to as the climax of indecency. Possibly it was a very much modified version of that much condemned disrobing scene which was presented at the Lyceum last night as the star feature of "The Turtle," but, at all vents, those who have witnessed the disrobing scene in "Fra Diavola" without biushing could not even feel shocked at manner in which Miss Evesson made her preparations for retiring last wight. If the disrebing scene is not as bad as painted, "The Turtle" taken in its entirety is much worse than reports credited it with being. It is indecent and thoroughly tained from rise to fall of curtain. The greater part of the indecencies are thrown into the farce by the brazen chambermaid and the corpulent mother-in-law of Champalier, who has been dubbed "The Turtle" by his wife because he is slow.

The house of Champalier has more but an apartment is required for the attorney of "The Turtle's' wife. The chambermaid sugsests there is a room in the attic and then the attorney elevates his eyebrows in disgust, she naively remarks that it is next to hers and that she will show him the way. He decides that the attle room will do. The next morning the lawyer cannot find his boots and makes a great fuss about it tresses that help to keep the waves of for upwards of ten minutes that the audience may the better perceive the sequence of events. After Jumard Leiden, Charles Philips, Gilbert Gardhas besought almost everybody in the ner, Gertrude Port and Ray and Mideast to find his boots, the chambermaid appears. "Look in my room," she says with a look that means as truly as words, "you stupid fellow," and Jumard rushes unstairs to the chambermaid's room. That's a sample of the elever dialogue and apt wit of the

The plot turns on the usual multiplicity of wives and the inevitable mother-in-law found in every farce corrowed from the French. In real humor the farce is utterly lacking. True brightness it has none. To tear down all respect for the married state seems to be the object for which the Three was written.

Champalier has a beautiful wife who conceives a passion for an artist. She nags at her husband until in desperation he seeks a divorce and marries This is what at the time she thinks she wants. His second wife is a young woman, who was to marry Champatter by her parents. On the night of her marriage a young man she loves forces his way into her bed chamber. The exchange of endearments can hardly be reconciled with her new station in life, but seemingly she is unaware of any change. It's all so new you think that the poor, fluttering bird forgets her added responsibilities; but she won't let you think that, for after many embraces she bids Adolph depart before her husband discovers him. She realizes the lax condition of her morals, you see. To further impress you with this fact she promises to leave her husband's side at midnight and join Adolph in an arbor in the Beautiful picture that to put on the stage for the "young person" to condents. The entire atmosphere of the farce is permeated with allusions that are everything but props to good morals. Within the last ten years many indecencies have crept into the performances served up in the best theaters, but with "The Turtle" the limit seems to have been reached. The bars that can still be let down are not visible to the naked eye, "The Turtle" had the advantage of a fine stage setting and a reasonably

THE MARKETS.

Wall Street Review.

New York, March 15.-The changes in stock prices today were mixed with lesses prevailing. For the greater part of the day stocks were under pressure, in part due to the strongth in the call money market, where 5 per cent, was received for some loans though most of the business was at per cent. The selling of Manhattan was attributed to the underwriting syndicate of the issue of new stock, although there was no means of ascertaining the real source. The stock closed with a loss of nearly two points after an earlier extreme decline 3% Kansas City, Pittsburg and Gulf left off 4 points down in anticipation of a possible heavy assessment in the plan of reorganization. American Steel and Wire dropped 1% with a smaller sympathetic recession in Federal Steel isues. There were fractional recessions, too, in Northern Pacific, Atchisons, the Readings and the Grangers. American Tobacco rose two points but Continental Tobacco, now dealt in in the unlisted department, made, compared with the opening, a net loss of 11% for the common and for the preferred. New York Air Brake jumped 101/4 points; and Consolidated Gas, however, rose %. Metropolitan Street Railway, People's Gas and Sugar gave some evidence of strength. The closing tone was uncertain with prices below the best and above the worst. Total sales were 540,100 shares. Today's bond market, while irregular, showed a yielding tendency with extreme weakness in Kansas City, Pittsburg and Gulf firsts. Total sales, $2,550,000. United States new 4s registered advanced 16 and do. coupon 14 in the bid price,

By J. R. L. Carrington & Co.

New York, March 15.—The market opened below last night's and at once sold off under pounding by traders and very heavy selling for London account. The chief trading was in Ontario and Western, Atchison, American Steel and Wire and Manhatian. The last two being conspicuously weak. Money was bid up to be reat, in the sarly morning inducing traders to pound the whole list, Manhatian is beginning to bear fruit; when the stock was 11s, we advised its sale for par. It sold very close to les and we have no doubt will sell as close to 80 within next two months. At the moment it shows some disposition to rally and may so up again around 11s or 112. At any place above 109 it is a great sale, however. Steel and Wire common was very weak on liquidation of a long account which had been thrown on the market owing to the discrimination against the stock as collateral. It is a safe purchase on any weak spots, however. The market continued very duil and exceptionally weak up to 2 o'clock, when a sharp advance in Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Flower stock generally, started the traders and light waisted bears to covering and the market sold up in some cases above the opening prices.

As we said yesterday the market is no sale on these very weak movements. It is a sale on very streng spots and while sile on these very weak movements. It s a sale on very strong spots and while professional as it is now should only be professional as it is now should only be raided in for short turns. The tightness of money of the present week is unloubtedly due to the Central Pacific and Alton payments, this need be considered except as a temporary condition. At same time, for the next thirty days, we are liable to have a certain amount of tringency and for that reason, we do not solley in purchases events as the more ve in purchases except as shows evidences of being ket shows evidences of being oversold, on weakness, however, the Flower stocks, some of the Coalers and, we think. Burlington and Quincy are a purchase. The latter has been the favorite bear foot bail for some time and is beginning to show evidences of being oversold. Market closed tregular but firm.
