ARCHBALD.

The entertainment given Friday evening under the management of Thomas Cummings at the Opera house was largely attended and the persons who took part in making it a success deserve great credit. Mr. Jennings is one of the greatest comedians in the county and always pleases an audience. Miss Susie Little, of Scranton, gave a very pretty solo in a pleasing manner, then Miss Hannah Barrett gave a very amusing recitation and Little Bortha Havers pleased the crowd with a very pretty solo. Miss Lizzie White sang a very beautiful solo and then the Misses Powderly, of Carbondale, gave a pretty duet in a pleasing manner; Mr. Joe Battle, a talented young man from Carbondale, sang a beautiful solo with the Phonograph Quartette accompaniment. Mr. Battle is the possessor of a clear, rich voice. Patrick Gaughan, one of Archbald's talented young men, pleased the audience by giving a very touching solo and deserved great credit. Fraise is also due the Philharmonic quartette, which consists of four young men, who gave

AVOCA.

The death of Miss Mary Walsh, daughter of Michael Walsh, of Spring street, occurred on Sunday morning, after a week's illness. Her death was entirely unexpected, and has cast a deep shadow throughout the town, for there were few people who were not acquainted with her, and recognized her agreeable and affable disposition. She was a member of the Daughters of Erin and St. Joseph's sodality. Besides her father, she is survived by two sisters, Bridget and Rose, and three brothers, Thomas, of Scranton; James, of Old Forge; and Michael, of Pittsburg. The funeral will take place on Tuesday.

THE LADIES' AUXILIARY OF ST. ALOYSIUS SOCIETY.

The Ladies' auxiliary of St. Aloysius society will meet this evening. The funeral of Mrs. Annie Thompson took place on Saturday afternoon from the family residence on South Main street. The remains reposed in a handsome casket surrounded by many beautiful floral emblems. Services at the house and church were conducted by Rev. D. T. Smythe, assisted by the Langefield choir. The pall-bearers were Robert Gratman, William Mitchell, Charles Wagoner, James O'Malley, Daniel Thomas and John Brown. Interment was made in Langefield cemetery.

The funeral of Mrs. Gallagher, of Connetton, took place yesterday afternoon. Interment was made in Langefield cemetery. The ten-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McGivlyn, died on Saturday morning, after several days' illness of brain fever. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery. Dr. R. H. Carmody left last week for his home in Sayre. The doctor has been attending his brother, Rev. T. F. Carmody, during the past few months. During that time he has made many friends, who regret that he could not remain with them. Rev. Captain Branson will complete his evangelistic work in the Primitive Methodist church this evening. During his stay he has made nearly two hundred conversions and many new members have been added to the flock. Tonight he will give the eventful history of his life, which will be very interesting. Admission, ten cents. The audience that filled the Barsefield opera house on Friday evening was a flattering ovation to the Daughters of Erin. It being their first public entertainment. The principal feature of the evening was an address given by Attorney M. J. Dixon on "The Life and Works of St. Patrick." Mr. Dixon has been before the public on several occasions, but his discourse on Friday evening was a noble effort and was

BOSTON'S BIG STATION.

It is the Largest Edifice of Its Kind in the World. From Harper's Weekly. The Great South Railway station in Boston, the largest edifice of its kind in the world, was opened for use on the first day of this year. It provides terminal facilities for two great railway lines, the Boston and Albany, and the Boston and Maine. The station is centrally located in the heart of the business section of Boston. The city co-operated with the railway companies by re-arranging the street system about the station at an enormous cost. The location, at the corner of Summer street and Atlantic avenue, with one side of the station bordering the harbor-front along a broad street, is exceptionally good for a monumental effect. Approached by Federal or Summer street, the effect of the magnificent facade, with its breadth of 375 feet, is imposing. The station was built and is owned and operated by the Boston Terminal company, composed of trustees representing the several railroad corporations that furnished the funds. It was planned and designed by George B. Francis, resident engineer, and Shovel, Rutan & Coolidge, architects. The total frontage on three streets is 2,150 feet. The building covers thirteen acres and there are twenty-two acres of yard-room besides. The maximum dimensions of the building are 50x725 feet. The bond houses on Atlantic avenue and Atlantic street are five stories high, and above the first story is occupied by the offices of the Terminal company and the railway companies. The vast train-shed is 602 feet long by 550 feet wide, and has a height of 112 feet. The roof is of the cantilever type, and is light and delicate looking steel trusswork of the enormous roof has a clear sweep in one great curve from side to side, upheld by three spans that divide the area into what might be called a nave and two aisles. A remarkable feature is the practical doubling of the train capacity by providing for the suburban service in a "subway" space beneath the main platforms of the train-shed, where the great width of the station enables the construction of two loops of tracks, over which, by the use of either electric or compressed air—which will probably be adopted for the suburban services of the railways entering the station—two thousand trains daily, in and out, can be accommodated. As soon as all the railways will begin using the station there will enter and leave it 25,000,000 persons a year. The twenty-eight sub-tracks on the main
