YUKON INDIANS.

Good-Natured and Patient in Their Sad Environment.

The Indians on the Yukon are goodnatured and harmless. In many ways they remind one of the southern negro. They sing "My Girl's a High Born Lady" and all the latest Bowery airs. It is said that the British drumbeat but nowadays popular songs do the same thing, and in a much more thorough way. At Guam, our new possession in the Ladrones, the newspapers tell us the natives sing "Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-aye," and this air is often heard along the Yukon. No doubt it has penetrated to Timbuctoo and the sacred city of Thibet. Judging from the Yukon, native music seems to be dving out. The catchy airs of the music hall are supplying a world music. The Indians have keen ears, though their voices can hardly be called melodious. Some of them will catch an air after hearing it once, and reproduce it correctly by humming or on the mouth organ. I never heard an Indian whistle or sing at the full extent of his lungs, though likely they do both. Give an Indian a mouth organ, "juice harp," as Huckleberry Finn's negro had it, or an accordion, and you will lusure his happiness, no matter if he is cold or starving. The Indian is as yet ignorant of the banjo, but when he s once introduced to it I think it will be his favorite instrument, as it is with his sable brother. It must be borne in mind that I am speaking of the interior Indians. The coast Indians are are powerfully built, and a twelveyear-old girl will trudge along with as heavy a pack as the average white man can carry, while their skookum packers carry as much as a horse. Indians are not particular about the condition of their food, and will dispose of some pretty rank messes, but one thing they will not eat is wolf, More surprising still, if true, is the reported fact that Indian dogs will not eat wolf. These dogs rob white men's caches, tearing open sacks and gorging on raw flour and catmeal, and nothing from soap to sulph matches is safe from their depredations. Wanting to dispose of the carcasses of the wolves we killed below Selkirk, I asked the Indians if they could use them. They taid no. I suggested feeding to the dogs, and they shook their heads again. "Dog no muck much wolf," they said. "Tedder way, wolf muck muck dog."

When the time comes for starving, the Indian takes it as a matter of fact, and contentedly. Only once in a while is there a weak-livered one who cries and says; "Muck muck all gone." Fraid poor Indian will die." They peal the bark from pine and even popple trees and eat the softer inner portion. The pine bark is full of rosin and nasty stuff, and there is certainly no nutriment in it. It serves, however, to fill the stomach and lessen the gnawing at the inwards. One can travel for miles along the Yukon and never be out of sight of peeled trees, marked with the characteristic arrow. shaped blaze. The fact signifies the frequency of periods of starvation, for there are y a few hundred Indians in all on the whole length of the up-
