Artificial Eyes. People Who Wear False Optics Are Very Common Nowadays. According to German authority people wearing false eyes must be pretty nearly as common as the remainder of the victims collectively whom fate has deprived of a portion of their bodies, be it organ or limb. Every year, it is said, no fewer than 200,000 glass eyes are manufactured in the German empire, and it is, of course, far from probable that the whole of the world's supply should be made in Germany. On the contrary, it is stated in La Medicine Moderne that a single French firm turns out at least 300,000 glass eyes annually, and that there are several other factories in France the output of which is about the same. Now, it will naturally be asked, can this enormous stock be utilized? Glass eyes, although essentially brittle, are little liable to injury, do not wear out quickly, and are quite independent of the vagaries of fashion. Once suited, the owner of a glass eye may make it serve him a considerable time.
