On Monday the employes of the store petitioned the proprietor to close the stores Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings at 7 o'clock, and Mr. Smith held the matter under consideration until last night, when he refused to comply with their demand.

The clerks contend that stores in merchants of the South Side are willing to grant a shorter workday to their employes if Mr. Smith will fall in

They further assert that the custom in the store has not only been to work late as 11 o'clock, putting up orders.

They agree that Mr. Smith is an excellent employer, but they feel that they are entitled to the same recognition that is accorded clerks in other stores. A petition has been drawn up trons, they assert, requesting them to make their purchases earlier in the day, and thus advance the cause of the

Some Thoughts Suggested by Statisics of the Professions.

The Art Exchange has this to say with regard to women in art work: "Statistics are not to be trusted absolutely, but some recently published figures showing the invasion of the professional field by women afford the thinking ones among us food for reflection. It is stated by those who devote their energies to gathering such information that 11,000 women is the United States follow art as a profession. In no other profession are so many women employed, except in music, whose followers, as vocalists and ty-eight hundred men are engaged in literature and 890 in journalism. Besides these, there are 600 employed in dramatic authorship. The actresses number 4,000. Contemplation of these figures will afford some idea of the keen competition for employment between men and women in our cities, It will also point to the necessity for better equipment among women seeking employment in their chosen field. It is a recognized fact among those who come much in contact with professional workers that few of them are adequately trained for the work they would undertake. The superficiality of the study and the total unfitness of the average woman for her task are enough to startle one who comes in contact with her for the first time. Her assurance, too, which usually accompanies ignorance, is so amazing that few persons have the temerity to undeceive her, so she goes on in her blindness, doing herself and those whom ject, "Receiving the Lord's Supper, the work. Solemn and Impressive Ceremonies Conducted by Bishop Potter, of New York, Assisted by Bishop Talbot and the Clergy Who Were in Attendance at the Episcopal Convention Just Closed-Bishop Potter's Father Officiated in a Similar Capacity in Old St. Stephen's.

St. Stephens' Protestant Episcopal thurch, Wilkes-Barre, wherein were held the sessions of the Central Pennsylvania convention, just closed, was dedicated yesterday morning with elaborate ceremontes conducted by Right Rev. Henry C. Potter, D. D., bishop of the diocese of New York, azsisted by Bishop Talbot, of this diocese, and Rev. Dr. Jones, pastor of the church and many other prominent clergymen who were in attendance at the convention. The services began at 10 o'clock and were selemn and Impressive, A procession in which were the vestrymen and vested choir of the church, the visiting ciergy, the officiating ciergy and Bishops Potter and Talbot, filed out of the parish building and into the and took their respective places, Bishop Talbot chanting the twenty-fourth Psalm as the procession moved up the aiste. Then followed the ritualistic ceremonies prescribed for the occasion and conclusion Bishop Potter preached the dedication sermon. His address to the members of the parish

ored parish, I congratulate you with all my heart upon the record of that past which lies behind you today. I rejoice with you in the long bede-roll of saints and servants of God who whether in the ministry or out of it have wrought here and worshipped here. I rejoice with you that this church stands unmoved and substantially unchanged, upon its ancient and stable spiritual foundations; that the prayers of our fathers are still uplifted here; and that His Word, writen and preached, will continue to be ward and His holy sacraments to be administered with the sacred walls,

But what, now, of your future? With what convictions must we turn our faces other sections of the city observe the toward that, and in what temper must early closing movement, and that the we deal with it? To those questions there is a three-fold answer. A church exists first of all, for worship, and in recognizing that fact, we are bound to recognize that, it its faith is Catholic its worship should be marked by the notes of that Catholicity. The Reformation sentiment stripped our mother Church of England until 9 o'clock every evening, but some-times they are compelled to remain as late as 11 o'clock, putting up orders.

The scenes representing the early settlement of the western part of our country are enter taining and are object lessons of great value of giving life and motion to those things we have read of in the histories of our school days. The students of anthropology never saw a congregation of people so varied and diverse as is gathered from the four quarters of the globe in this one arena, and at the same time the value of the study is enhanced by the exhibitions of the various modes of life in peace, in war and in their pastimes as given by these

THEY WILL CONFER TODAY

Viewers on the Opening of Wyoming Avenue to Meet Officials of the Delaware and Hudson Company.

Today, W. W. Davis, George Okell and Carl McKinney, the viewers appointed by court to assess the damages for opening Wyoming avenue, will have a conference with officials of the Delaware and Hudson company to finally adjust the terms on which the company will remove its tracks from the line of the proposed extension.

It is understood the company is disposed to vacate the street for the actual cost of securing a new right of way and the labor of moving its tracks. It is willing also to make due allowance for the benefit that will accrue from the straightening of its line, the increased facilities that will be forded about its freight house and the increased business that will come to its road from the improvement of the

This disposition on the part of the company is conditional upon the manner in which the viewers deal with the other property holders whose properties have to be condemned. As a rule persons regard the entrance upon their property by a corporation, and especially a municipality, as a sort of open door to fortune. This instance is no exception. Exhorbitant prices are demanded and the chances are that the viewers will have no easy time in effecting reasonable compromises, if indeed they can compromise at all in most of the cases. Realizing this the railroad company declined to make terms until the viewers had arrived at a conclusion as to the basis of settlement with the other property holders. The viewers have about completed their estimates and will teday deal with the company. On the outcome of this conference depends in a great measure the carrying out of the improvement.

If the expenses can be kept below $40,000 it is likely that councils will give the project its approval. If it costs $60,000 as the appropriation asked for would seem to contemplate, it is safe to say the appropriation will b wanting for some time at least. CAUSES MANY WRECKS.

Compasses Treacherous.

rom the St. Louis Post-Dispatch How a snip's compass could lead her master astray has been one of the mysteries of Lake Superior for years, but it is probably explained now by one of the vesselmen in the only way that seems consistent. One of his own boats suffered a week ago at a time when he knew his compasses were right. His ship was heading for Duluth, and for safety was two points south of her course, which should have taken her to the entry at Superior, seven miles south from the harbor entrance at -uluth. Without warning the vessel grated on a beach and stopped. An investigation showed her to be on a sanubank at the mouth of the Knife river, twenty miles east from Duluth. She was heading directly up the river, almost due north, but the compass still held two points south of the course for Duluth. The boat had, by the charts, turned almost a right angle. Within 125 feet of either side rock reefs ran out into the lake, on which she would have cut herself to pieces. To the southerly side, where a trifling less deviation would have taken the vessel, lay an island of rock that would have driven her bow back to her engines and hunched her up into a ball. As it was, a tug pulled her off, and a survey showed not a dollar of damage. Indeed, nothing is publicly known of the fortunate accident till this writing. Many such a casualty has occurred from time to 'me, and the river on which this boat rought up has been the scene of two or three groundings every season for years. Some of them have resulted luckily, others have been total losses. The only explanation for these groundings and deviations is that a great bed of magnetic iron sand lies in the bed of the stream, covered by the washings of quartz sand from the rocks of

The same explanation probably accounts for the late disasters at other points on the north shore. Indeed, in a gathering of vessel captains in an agent's office in Duluth this week they discussed the remarkable aberrations of compasses this tall, which every man had noticed far more than be fore in any year. During the week one of the captains of one of the great fleets, a man noted as the most careful and the best man in the line, who has not lost his company a cent in repair for years, found himself on the north shore and three points off his course, though the compass was identical with its indication of every trip of the season. He got off without much loss, but the fact was none the less remarkable. How did he gett here, and what made the deviation?
