What a shut out! Louis F. Sockalexis, the Indian base ball player, pleaded gullty to the charge of intoxication in the police court at Cleveland, O., yesterday. He was ar-rested in the Lyceum theater for snoring. A fine of $1 and costs was imposed against him. He paid it and went his way, promising not to drink any more. Umpires have their woes, but it is Hank O'Day's carnest supplication that the next partner he has won't get sick and desert him at Baltimore. The horde of demons who populate the stands there can make life a burden to any two um pires that ever lived or ever will. Imaweight of rancor and powerfully but rudely expressed indignities fall upon the levoted head of a solitary judge of play. "Rotten!" "Robber!" "Get behind the plate!" "Why don't you stand behind the pitcher." "Lobster!" "You're a crook!" These are mild terms of endearment that are showered from grandstand and bleachers alike in the minor town of syndicate base ball, where pennants have been won and nearly won.-Philadelphia Inquirer.
