A REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIER.

His Name Was Edward Stokes and

He Is Buried in Jermyn. "It is a fact not generally known that we have a Revolutionary soldier buried here. His name was Edward Stokes and his body rests in the Protestant cemetery. Each Memorial day his grave is decorated with more than the usual complement of flowers. "There is little known concerning him other than the fact that he is a soldier of the Revolution 'mustered out.' Only recently, indeed, was the fact that he was a Revolutionary soldier brought to light. It used to be the custom when the list of graves to be decorated was given out for publication to place 'Rev.' after his name. as an abbreviation of 'Revolutionary. As a consequence the old hero was anhonored and unknown while the man whose name followed Stokes on the list went 'sounding down the ages' as Rev. John Smith, or Rev. someone else, as the case may be.

It was only by chance that this offense against the veteran was discovered, for it must be offensive, as well as anomalous, to a warlike spirit to place the designation of a man of peace before the name of a man of war. Since the error was discovered the man who makes out the list has been care ful to add to the name of Edward Stokes these words, dear to the heart of every good American: 'A Soldier of the Revolution.' "Mr. Stokes was 62 years old when he died. Close to his grave is that of John Hess, a veteran of the Mexican
