

EVENTS OF DAY IN WEST SCRANTON

AMBULANCE FUND IS STARTED FOR HOSPITAL.

The First Subscription of $10 Received from G. W. Jenkins—Contributions Will be Received at The Tribune Branch Office—Closing Exercises at Nos. 19 and 32—Officers Elected and Installed—Two Young Couples Wedded—Several Accidents—Other Notes and Personals.

The West Side hospital is in need of an ambulance. And it needs one as soon as possible. Who will start a popular subscription for the purchase? The amount needed is $300 and in order to carry on the good work being done at the institution an ambulance is needed nearly every day.

When the Thirteenth regiment asked for an ambulance The Tribune started the subscription list and in a very short time the amount necessary was realized. Hon. John R. Farr, one of the hospital directors, brought the matter to the attention of the West Side board of trade at its recent meeting, but the matter was not acted upon.

The Tribune now proposes to raise the necessary amount for the hospital ambulance and has started the ball rolling by calling for popular contributions, which will be received at its West Scranton branch office in Jenkins' drug store, corner of Main avenue and Jackson street. The sums received each day will be published in this department.

Contributions will be received each day up to 10.30 p. m. by Mr. Jenkins or any attaches of the store and any sum from one dime up will be acceptable. William Price & Son, of South Main avenue, have volunteered to house the ambulance and furnish a team free of charge and the amount necessary ought to be forthcoming in a short time.

The hospital is open to patients throughout the valley and the work thus far accomplished speaks volumes for its usefulness.

Let the residents of West Scranton, who are proud of the only state institution in their midst, show their appreciation by contributing to the ambulance fund.

The petition for signatures and contributions is now ready at The Tribune branch office. The first contribution received towards the fund is the sum of $10, which has been donated by George W. Jenkins, the drugist.

The Funeral of the Late James Ruane Held Yesterday from the Home of His Mother—A Very Pathetic Case.

From the home of his mother on Cedar avenue, Mrs. Bridget Ruane, the funeral of the late James Ruane took place yesterday afternoon.

One of the many pathetic features of the funeral was the arrival of Joseph and Patrick Ruane, brothers to the deceased man, who arrived yesterday afternoon at 3.25 from Omaha, Neb., where they went to attend the funeral of their other brother, Thomas Ruane, assistant chief of the fire department of that city.

The funeral of James was delayed in hopes that they might reach the city in time for the funeral.

Serviced by the remains of James were held in St. John's church on Fig street. Rev. E. J. Melley, rector of the church, officiated. In his remarks he referred feelingly to the affliction the family was called upon to bear. To the life of the deceased young man he paid a glowing tribute.

At the close of the services the remains were borne to St. Mary's cemetery at Dunmore and laid to rest in the family plot. The pall-bearers were: Thomas and Patrick Ruane, James Conroy, John O'Malley, John J. Ruddy and James Murray.

SHORT NEWS ITEMS.

VALEDICTORY OF MISS SNYDER OF THE HIGH SCHOOL.

It Was Read by Her at the Commencement Exercises Thursday Night—Its Cleverness of Construction, Beauty of Diction and Thoughtfulness Caused No Little Favorable Comment—"The Assassination of Lincoln" Was the Subject—Live News Notes of the Day.

"The Assassination of Lincoln" was the subject of Miss Lucretia Snyder's valedictory at the High school commencement Thursday night. It was a very thoughtful effort. The essay was as follows:

For four years Civil war had been raging between the North and the South had been kept up with varying intensity. Many fertile acres had been laid waste; many homes, villages, cities and towns and misery stared man in the face.

But now, Lee and nearly all the other Confederate leaders having surrendered, the war was ended, and peace settles over the country. Fathers, mothers, wives and children are watching for the return of loved ones, and sorrowing for those who at Shiloh, Chickamauga or Gettysburg had fought their last fight.

But in spite of this sorrow and in spite of the enormous losses sustained throughout the war, there is a fullness of joy in the hearts of the people. They are filled with gladness at the termination of the terrible conflict. Slavery, that awful blot on the history of our country, has been wiped out of existence. There is no longer a North and South. It is now one country, united by the shed blood of thousands upon thousands of brave men.

And so, the people are joyful in the midst of their sorrow. Bells are rung, cannons are fired, flags are raised, and everywhere the end of the war is being celebrated.

NO REST, NO HOLIDAYS.
At this time among the multitudes of happy people there is none happier than he who through all the trying period stood at the helm and safely guided the ships of state through the storm. During the last four years he had had no rest; no holidays. He would not leave the helm until all danger was passed and the storm over. At last his labors had been crowned with complete success and he was rejoicing over the result of his work.

April 14, 1865, in particular was a most exciting day. In fact, the most exciting day since the first gun of the war had been fired from Fort Sumter in Charleston harbor. At noon on that day the president ended a cabinet meeting. After this he went for a drive with Mrs. Lincoln. He seemed like a boy out of school. He talked over events that had happened earlier in life and spoke of his old home, telling Mrs. Lincoln that when his term expired they would go back to Illinois and he would open a law office there.

It had been announced in the newspapers that the president and General Grant would attend Ford's theatre that evening. General Grant was prevented from going, but Mrs. Lincoln, though for some undefined reason unwilling to go, was persuaded to attend, that the friends might not be disappointed.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln reached the theatre about 9 o'clock and with them were Miss Harris and Major Rathbone. Mr. Lincoln was seated in a chair near the door of the box. The curtain had raised for the second act, and he, interested in the play, was leaning forward when a shot was heard.

A man was seen to leap from the president's box upon the stage, shouting "Sic semper tyrannis!" The South's cry of vengeance was heard. As he jumped upon the stage, the spurs in his boot having caught in the folds of an American flag, he fell, breaking a bone in his hand. He managed to escape, only to be pursued and shot a few days later.

The ball received by the president entered just behind the left ear, and he was carried unconscious to a house across the street, where he died the next morning.

A DREADFUL DAY.
April 15 was one of the most dreadful days in the history of the country. No words can express the grief and horror of the people. A nation but the day before had been filled with joy, was now filled with sorrow and gloom. The flags that had been triumphantly floating in the breeze the day before were now at half-mast, and before darkness had settled over the land the people, moved by a common feeling, had draped their houses in mourning.

Grief and vengeance filled the hearts of the soldiers. The negroes wept over their irreparable loss. The blow to the government was great, but the ship of state rode safely through the storm, for in its course, it had come so far safely and would continue to the end.

The remains of the martyred president were taken to Springfield and there laid at rest.

Lincoln had taken the executive chair when there was in disorder, the treasury empty, the small army and navy scattered and disarmed. Many officers were at heart rebels. The democratic party was hostile and in sympathy with the South. His own party contained the elements of discord and did not have the confidence of the people. There was a great deal of personal and unfavorable prejudice against Lincoln himself, and some held him in contempt. None extended cordial good-will and aid. Yet in spite of all this, by his sound judgment, his wisdom, his integrity and his trust in God, he crushed the most stupendous of rebellions, and supported by great armies and great resources. He strengthened his party, made peace between rival military leaders, placed men of skill and ability at the head of the armies and won the respect and confidence of people not only of his own country, but in other countries as well. He struck blow after blow at slavery until that institution was demolished by his proclamation of emancipation. It was a man not lacking in boldness and firmness and without vanity. One of his striking characteristics was that he was always in close touch with the people. He had done much for the union. But now his great work was finished and even while hearing the shout of victory, he was assassinated.

Only one name can be mentioned with his—that name is the name of Washington. Lincoln was as just as a patriarch, as true to his country. His name will live always, time will only add brightness to its lustre.

SHORT NEWS NOTES.
The funeral of James McLaughlin, who died suddenly Wednesday morning, took place from his late home on Harper street yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock and was largely attended. The funeral services were conducted at the house by Rev. W. F. Gibbons, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Interment was made in the Dunmore cemetery.

On Thursday last Mr. and Mrs. Leander Yeager, of Pittston, were very agreeably surprised by a number of their friends from this place, who enjoyed a pleasant day at their home. The party had a special car to convey them to and from Pittston and returned home in the evening.
