FRED HEINTZMAN SHOT HIMSELF IN THE HAND.

Was Examining a Revolver and Did Not Know It Was Loaded—Annual Outing of the Employees of the Sauquoit Silk Mill at Lake Ariel Saturday—James Feeney, of Pittston Avenue, Injured While Getting Off a Trolley Car—Notes of a Personal Nature.

Fred Heintzman, of Stone avenue, was shot through the left hand yesterday afternoon. He was examining a revolver and did not know it was loaded. He pulled the trigger and the bullet entered the hand at the palm. Dr. Albert Kolb was called to attend him. He made an incision at the wrist and removed the unwelcome piece of lead.

ANNUAL OUTING.

The annual excursion of the employees of the Sauquoit silk mill was run to Lake Ariel Saturday. The attendance was unquestionably the largest in the history of the lake. Fifty-eight cars, divided into ten trains, were necessary to convey the excursionists to the lake.

The day was passed in a pleasant manner, Superintendent Davis and the committee being energetic in caring for the pleasure of their employees and guests. Music for dancing was furnished by Bauer's orchestra. The trip home was made without the slightest hitch that would mar the occasion.

TWO ACCIDENTS.

James Feeney, a young man of Pittston avenue, is suffering from injuries sustained from a fall while alighting from a street car Friday night. When he jumped he fell in front of a horse and wagon. He escaped with slight injuries, the animal stopping when Feeney lay in front of him.

EVENTS OF DAY IN WEST SCRANTON

REV. MR. BOYL SPOKE ON MISSION OF ANGLI-SAXONS.

They Are Moulding the Opinion of the World—America's Duty in the Philippines—Believes in Saving America for America's Sake—Car Ran Away on West Lackawanna Hill and a Number of Persons Were Injured—Funeral of the Late George McKnight.

"The Mission of the Anglo-Saxon Race" was the theme upon which the Rev. Mr. O'Boyl, pastor of the Plymouth church, spoke last evening to a large congregation. Rev. Boyl said, in part, as follows: "Every race has had a mission to perform. If we read history we can see between the lines that God has had a hand in the building of nations. The Greeks, Hebrews and Romans, these have each had a wonderful mission to perform. Each in their turn has reformed the same and yet each has been a failure."

"The Greeks' mission was an intellectual one, producing a wonderfully perfect language, in which the books of the Bible were printed and sent to the people around the Mediterranean sea. Rome's mission was to prepare the physical conditions for the coming of Christ. The Hebrews' mission was the establishing of the belief in one God. Each nation accomplished its mission and yet each ended in failure. The reason for the failure was that each had but one idea. In the person of Christ all the nations were united."

"The Anglo-Saxon race combines all three of these missions. In philanthropy the Anglo-Saxon church surpasses that of any other church, and is always looking out to help and do some good. As the Hebrew carried Mithelam around the Mediterranean, so the Anglo-Saxon will carry pure religion around the world. As the Greek carried his language around the Mediterranean, so the Anglo-Saxon will carry his language around the world. Some have already said that it will only be a little while before the language of the Anglo-Saxon will be the language of the world."

"The Anglo-Saxon is the greatest race in history. There are no more worlds to conquer. What, then, is its mission? The Anglo-Saxon has been in training for years for one purpose, to mould the opinion of the world. I believe in an Anglo-Saxon alliance and believe it is the finest race to survive. "People speaking of wars to come, think the next war will be a religious one. Not so, it will be a war of races. The Anglo-Saxon race will conquer, not by arms or force, but by genius, intellect and manhood. I believe in expansion, and the United States must meet her duty in the far-away Philippines. I don't believe in saving America for America's sake but for the world's sake."

A RUNAWAY CAR. Passengers on car No. 20, Petersburg-Luzerne, passed through an experience which is not likely to be repeated. A repetition of which they would not care for. The car was laden with people returning from an excursion to Harvey's lake and had been side-tracked at Ninth street to allow another car to pass. After the car had passed the conductor gave "three bells," the signal for the motorman to reverse the motor. The motorman in doing so lost control of his car and it ran down the hill rapidly.

The passengers seeing the motorman had lost control of the car, became terribly excited and began jumping off the car, thereby being precipitated to the pavement with much force. By the time the car had reached the bottom of the hill all the passengers had jumped off except two young ladies, Misses Louise Whelan and Mary McColligan. They decided to make it, and made no attempt to alight while the car was in motion. However, when the car reached the railroad crossing both were thrown out. Miss Whelan was injured about the shoulder and head, Miss McColligan is a daughter of Professor John McColligan and is slightly injured about the back. The clothes of both ladies were badly torn. Both young ladies were removed to their homes.

An in-bound freight train was striking down the track as the car struck the rails. It was brought to a standstill within three feet of where lay the unconscious form of Miss Whelan.

A largely attended funeral was that of the late Morgan Williams, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. David Williams, of Oswald court. The services were conducted at the home. Rev. H. H. Harris, of Taylor, officiated. The Ripple division, Sons of Temperance, of which the deceased was a member, attended. The pall-bearers and flower bearers were chosen from the lodge and were as follows: Pall-bearers, Arthur Thomas, Thomas Jones, William Jenkins, Arthur Thomas, James Davis and Evan Evans; flower bearers, Margaret Davis, Sarah Boynton, Bertha Chestnut and Maggie Davis.
