THREE D. L. & W. BREAKERS ARE TO RESUME

Steady Employment Will Be Given to 1,800 Hands Who Have Been Idle in Some Instances for Nearly Six Months—Lackawanna Likely to Tap Bradford County—Scarcity of Cars Is Not Causing as Much Trouble Here as in the West. Minor Notes.

Three of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western colliers that have been idle for more or less extended periods will resume operations just as soon as they can be put in shape. They are the Sloan, the Central and the Hyde Park, all located in Keyser Valley.

By judicious management in the transportation department the Lackawanna has escaped the car famine and, being in a position to take advantage of the present big demand for coal, proposes to make all that is possible out of its advantage. All the colliers will be worked to their fullest capacity and these three colliers, which have laid idle for one reason or another for from six weeks to six months, will be gotten in shape for work with all possible haste, that the most can be made out of the present boom. The Sloan and Central had been operated jointly since the burning of the Central breaker. When the slump came in the market they went idle and there was no telling when they would start up again, until the present boom came.

The Hyde Park collier was shut down about six weeks ago for repairs. The repairs were progressing at an ordinary rate until now, but from this on they will be pushed with all rapidity. Superintendent Loomis says that it will not be long after the first of October before all three colliers will be going again at their full capacity.

Each collier employed about 600 hands. When they shut down these men were taken care of as far as possible at the other mines, but many of them have had to be content with a day now and then wherever they could get a job.

Col. George Sanderson Returns from New England States.

Col. George Sanderson, who has just returned from a long trolley ride through the New England states, was seen yesterday by a Tribune representative and spoke interestingly of his trip.

"I had no idea," he said, "that so much pleasure could be obtained in such an informal, Bohemian way of traveling, but when I say I have seldom more thoroughly enjoyed myself it comprehends about all I can say. The open air, pure and fresh, the opportunity for seeing everything and studying human nature as it appears in the ever-changing passenger, the getting out to look at interesting and historical places without fear of missing trains—all combine to make it ideal when not hurried."

"Last spring my brother-in-law, Edward B. Sturges, and I agreed to try the experiment of a long trolley trip this fall and last Monday the opportunity of combining business with pleasure came. With Thomas E. Jones, who also had some business in the vicinity of Boston, I went to Southport, where we spent the night at Mr. Sturges' cottage and left at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning by trolley for Bridgeport."

"We traveled by steam road from there to Berlin, Conn., where the trip proper commenced. From Berlin via New Britain to Hartford, about sixteen miles, was a beautiful ride. At Hartford we took a hearty lunch and left for Springfield, Mass., about twenty-six miles, broken by a carriage ride of five miles.

"The roads passed through Windsor, the old town of Enfield and other beautiful New England villages. Enfield particularly interested me, as our family records show it was settled by ancestors on my mother's side—the Spaldings. Here also is the birthplace of the famous Senator Dixon.

"We went by rail from Springfield to Worcester, as it was late, and left the latter city early in the morning, intending to go through to Boston, but as it was raining we went only to South Framingham and from there by steam road.

"The next morning we took the trolley for Salem via Lynn and beautiful Swampscott and Marblehead. At Salem we looked over the ancient records and warrants for the execution of the witches, and then took the steam road to Boston.

"In the afternoon we went to Plymouth, where, of course, we spent an interesting time at the 'Rock' ('Burial Hill'), etc. Friday morning we left Boston for Fall River—a beautiful ride. At Taunton, Mr. Sturges left us and went by trolley to Providence and thence by the steam road to Southport.

"Mr. Jones and I kept on to Fall River and Newport. At the latter place we spent an hour or so driving around, took supper and then boarded the boat for New York. I do not think one who by trolley takes the trip can appreciate how thoroughly enjoyable it was."

"It will not be long before Cook will be having special cars for trolley excursions, as it looks as if there will be a network of trolley lines out through our beautiful country."

"The cessation of up and down hill riding reminded us of the gravities, and most people remember how exhilarating a ride to Honesdale or Hawley was."

UNCALLED FOR LETTERS.
 List of letters remaining uncalled for at the Scranton postoffice, Lackawanna county, Pa., Sept. 27, 1899. Persons calling for these letters will please say advertised and give date of lat. Ezra H. Rippe, P. M.; Mrs. Marvin Barnes, Rev. L. D. Bass, A. Bissell, Mrs. Dorothea Brandies, C. Bette, James Boyd, Lewis Barrett, E. C. Brainard, John J. Brogan; Mrs. Jane Corcoran, Miss Mabel Cor-most improved breakers in the anthracite coal regions.

This and That.
 Last Saturday was a record breaker in the matter of coal shipments from here over the Lackawanna. The total tonnage was 27,800 tons.

The Erie Railroad company has purchased 16,000 lanterns, with which it will decorate its piers in Jersey City and Weehawken in honor of Admiral Dewey.

It is an undisputed fact that there is no railroad or private concern that has as modern and up-to-date a blacksmith shop as the one just completed at Sayre for the Lehigh valley.

C. A. Tombrakes, the new division freight agent for the Lackawanna main line, will take charge Oct. 3. He is now in the city acquainting himself with his duties.

Mr. Teubrooke came from the Washaw and Lackawanna Discharge.

A new breaker, one of the largest in the world, has just been completed and put in operation at Williamstown by the Pennsylvania Coal company. The starting of the breaker will give employment to 200 more miners. The capacity is 2,000 tons a day.

The electric lighting system at White Mills, Wayne county, is now installed and on Saturday evening next the current will be turned on for the first time. The system is opened as an adjunct to the Hawley Electric Light company, which is composed of Scranton men. The current for White Mills is supplied from Hawley over a five-mile wire.

Officials say that if traffic continues to grow in October and November as it has in the last thirty days, a car famine will exist on every road in the country. This, they say, means that earnings will continue to show large gains over those of former years. The famine will likely result in a faster freight schedule all over the country, which may be retained after the supply of cars has been increased to meet the demand.

A railroad man in commenting upon the shortage of cars, said: "The railroads are short 100,000 cars. This is in spite of the fact that they have this year added 100,000 cars to their equipment. These new cars hold from one-half more to double the amount of the old cars, and we make them 10 per cent. more valuable still by better methods of handling them. But, considering all this, the car shortage is relatively greater than it ever was before."
