ANOTHER WELCOME TO DEWEY

Enthusiasm Great Washington's Reception of the Admiral.

OVATION ON THE JOURNEY

The Train Carrying the Admiral and ing Special Pass-Warm Reception it realized Dewey had gone by Given the Distinguished Guest at Electrical Effects and Gay Decorations-Dewey Announces His Intention of Residing in Washington-President McKinley's Greet-

Washington, Oct. 2.-The home-coming of Admiral George Dewey-for henceforth the national capitol is to be his home-was made the occasion for the greatest tribute ever paid by Washington to any individual. After the preliminary welcome in New York, itself unsurpassed in its kind, it renamed for the highest and greatest in the official world to hold out the hand of greeting to the famous admiral and to join with the people who are to be his fellow-citizens in bidding him welcome. The citizens had made every preparation to make the occasion worthy of their hero: The decorations were elaborate. Pennsylvania avenue was one mass of colored bunting along the entire line of murch from the station to the white house, and not concent with this, few private citizens failed to make some display of color on

The stately capitol stood revealed in all its queenly beauty in the powerful rays of many concentrated hants. The same device was used effectively in the case of other public buildings. On the facade of the newly completed general postoffice building flamed forth two incriptions set in electric points, the one citing the famous message of the president directing Dewey, then thougo forth to destroy the Spanish fleet and the other setting out the famous admiral's direction to the lamented epoch in the history of the United States. Twelve thousand members of civic organizations paraded before him, besides tens of thousands of non-organized citizens, and in a roar of cannon rockets and the blaze of red fire and the thunderous cheering of the populace, and the warm greeting of the head of the nation, Dewey came to the national capital to a welcome such as has not been known here hitherto. His journey here from New York had been one continuous ovation, limited in its intensity only by the density of the population Almost immediately after going aboard the train at Jersey City the admiral retired to his private car for luncheon, which was served for six, Admiral Dewey, his son, George, his brother and wife, Captain Lamberton and Lieutenant Brumby.

Thereafter the admiral lay down and tried to get a little sleep, but this was impossible, owing to the continuous ovation along the line.

Every town turned out its full population and every house and crossroads settlement was turned inside out to see the flying special pass.

Touched by Children.

Admiral Dewey was particularly touched all along the line by the number of children who turned out to see They formed a very large part of the crowd in every town and wherever there was a school house the chitdren had evidently been given a special recess to come out and cheer the train. Admiral Dewey said that he felt more touched and complimented by the attention of the children than by almost any other thing that had happened since his return to America. All along the line every train, freight or passenger, that passed the special saluted it with a long drawn blast of the whistle and in all the large towas the flyer slowed down within the ciry limits and there was a continual rare of steam from factories, machine shops and the shifting engines and trains on The train as it reached the sidings. the line of the District of Columbia stopped for a few minutes at the litstation of Deanwood, while the reception committee went through the formality of presenting the nation's guest the freedom of the district. The eremony was performed by District Commissioner Wight in the presence of the admiral's fleet captains, the military and naval members of the party and as many of the reception commit tee as could be crowded into the admiral's ear. John Addison Porter, secretary to the president, first extended President McKinley's greetings, to which the admiral returned his thanks very briefly. Commissioner Wright then extended the freedom of the nation's capital.

Admiral Dewey's reply was brief, as all of his speeches have been.

"I want to thank you very much, my friends," said he, "for this testimonial your regards. It is true that as long as I live, and I hope to live a long time (cheers) I intend to live in Washington. I thank you for this expres-Then dropping the tone of formality in which this had been uttered, he went through the party shak-

In a few minutes the train was in the brilliantly lighted depot. Taking the arm of W. H. Moses, chairman of the reception committee the admiral headed the procession down the station while the officers and committeemen fell in at the rear.

A mighty rear went up from the crowd as the admiral alighted at the portico of the executive mansion. Colonel Bingham, representing the president, stepped forward to escort him to the east room, where Secretary Long, Assistant Secretary Allen and a brilliant assemblage of naval officials were ready to extend to him the greeting of the navy.

As the admiral entered, Secretary Long grasped his hand and with enthusiasm said: "Admiral, I welcome you home. This is the navy department for the moment associates of the navy are assembled here to give you a hearty greeting. "Thank you, thank you," responded Admiral Dewey, first exchanging a few words of greeting with the secretary and then with Mr. Allen and other of-

Welcomed by the President.

There was no formality, and after the first greeting Secretary Long invited that many of the students could not gain the admiral to accompany him to the president's library, where Mr. McKiney and the members of the cabinet were awaiting him. Arm in arm Secetary Long and the admiral proceeded by the elevator to the upper floor of the mansion. The members of the cabinet had assembled in the cabinet room, while the president was alone in the library adjoining. As Secretary Long. entered with the admiral, the president came forward to greet the famous sailor and, grasping his hand, wished him a hearty welcome The admiral acknowledged the cordent and then asked as to the health sands of miles away in the far east, to of Mrs McKinley, saying he had heard with great regret that she had not been well In reply the president suggested that the admiral meet Mrs. McKinley, Gridley: "You may fire when you are They stepped out to the corridor, which endy, Gridley," which marked an Mrs. McKinley makes a sitting room, and here found her with some of her lady friends.

The admiral was presented and reseived from Mrs. McKinley, as well as the president, a most hearty welcome

Returning to the library, the president invited his cabinet associates to meet the admiral. Secretary Hay headed the party, followed by Secre tary Hitchcock. Postmaster General Smith, Attorney General Griggs, Secretary Root and Secretary Wilson. Former Secretary Alger was also present, having been requested by the president to join the party and was among those to meet the admiral. The greetings of the members of the cabinet were brief and then the president and Admiral Dewey headed the party out of the white house to the reviewing stand which had been erected at the head of Pennsylvania avenue, just south of the treasury building. President and Admiral.

As the admiral moved through the stand to the prow built out from its front leaning on the arm of President McKinley the crowd started a mighty cheer, which passed down the avenue and was taken up for blocks. The admiral frequently bowed his acknowledgements. The president and Admiral Dewey were joined at the front of the stand by Secretaries Hay, Root, Hitchcock and Wilson and Postmaster General Smith, officers of the Olympia and other naval officials. 2* the cheering at length died away be admiral turned to Mr. McKinley and the two, scating themselves, entered into conversation while awaiting the arrival of the procession. The head of the civic parade which had been arranged in honor of the ast miral began to pass in review before him shortly after 8 o'clock. There were many novel and interesting features, relieving the sameness of the or dinary civic parade. The speciacie marchers came up the laur'h of the avenue in the glare of red lights under sweeping arches of stars from thousands of Roman candles was beautiful and impressive. As the rear of the column passed, the public fell in behind and passed before the reviewing stand for an hour to get a glimpse at their hero. The crowd was so eager to see Dewey that they spoiled the effectiveness of this part of the arrangements by breaking through the ropes and surging about the grand-stand, where they gave vent to wild cheering and a noisy demonstration. Admiral Dewey gave frequent acknowledgements to cheers for him and seeing that the review had lost its distinctive character as a procession, quitted his place early,

Dewey Seeks Rest.

It was 9.10 o'clock when the fatigued recipient of the day's demonstrations reached the residence of Mrs. Washington McLean, mother of the Democratic candidate for governor of Ohio on K street, facing Farragut square McLean welcomed the admiral and turned over the house to him for his use during his stay in Washington. Mrs. McLean and the members of her family then left, going to her country residence. Beauvoir, in the suburbs of Washington. The admiral had arrived sooner than was expected, and before a crowd had collected. Presently the people surged in on all sides and for. some time would not believe the officer who said the admiral was inside. A band came up and serenaded the admiral, the crowd cheered and cheered and finally Dewey appeared at the window and bowed his acknowledgements. Cries of "Speech! Speech" were heard on every side, but met with no response. Luncheon was served by 9:30 and then the admiral retired. Crowds lingered about the house for some time.

IS VILALIO THE MAN?

As yet the police have no definite inermation concerning the identity of the man who killed Amelio Di Santo in the saloon of Joseph Steinplinger "Dutch Hollow" in South Scranton last Sunday afternoon. There is a strong suspicion that Tony Vilatio, who is under arrest, is the gullty man. but there is nothing very tangible on which to base that suspicion further than that he was engaged in the He does not deny that and fight could not if he would, for his cut hard shows that he had a part in Sunday afternoon's tragedy.

Pasqual Vilalio, brother of the prisner, who was frightfully slashed with a razor during the fight, is confined to a bed at Tony Wolfe's boarding house on Brook street. He will recover, but will be confined to the house for some When seen by a Tribune man yesterday he repeated what he said Sunday night that he and Frank Andra were engaged in a heated argument when a fight started in which every one used knives and razors. He persists that he did not know Di Santo. the murdered man.

Coroner Roberts performed an autopsy vesterday afternoon on the body of the murdered man at the morgue of Undertaker G. A. Miller, on Cedar avenue. He ascertained as was stated in The Tribune yesterday that the immediate cause of Di Santo's death was the saverance of the femural artery, near the groin. The coroner is of the opinion that the man who gave the slash stood behind his victin and extended fully four inches, almog striking the large bone of the right leg. There was an incision at the bridge of the nose and an abcusher on the first and second fingers of the left hand.

The following were empannelled as jury; Fred Weichel, Jacob Lewert, G. A. Miller, E. R. Conley, Patrick Miles and John J. Gordon. The time of the inquest was not set by Coroner

ET THE BAND PLAY.

Scranton never had a more royal welcome prepared for its guests than that which the visiting firemen are asked to partake of.

It is elaborate in every detail. The results of the hustling by the local committee-particularly during the past six weeks-are apparent at every turn. Nothing remains to be done. Every post is manned and every man is doing yeoman service. The decorations are practically complete and when one compared the city's appearance has Thursday with the gorgeous aspect is presented last night t was impossible to refrain from marvelling at the transformation. The visitors commenced arriving yeserday afternoon and by midnight there were nearly three hundred of them in the city, including all the state officers and many of the most prominent fivemen in the state. An informal reception was tendered them last night at the Jermyn, where the state headquarters have been established. Grand Marshal P. J. Hickey's general order for Thursday's parade was prepared last evening and is formally issued this morning. It indicates that there will be almost if not quite 5,000 firemen and musicians in line.
