SQUIRE GILBOY ON THE WAR PATH

CAUSES THE ARREST OF ALLEGED SCRANTONIAN AIDS.

Mr. and Mrs. George Doyle, of Duryea, Accused of Furnishing Libelous Matter to Dick Little and Mike O'Toole—Mrs. Doyle's Strange Encounter with a Detective.

Special to The Scranton Tribune.

Pittston, Oct. 4.—Squire Gilboy, of Duryea, is considerably put out over the article in the Scrantonian a few Sundays ago which mentioned his name in connection with the Corcoran murder case, and is determined to prove to the public that there is no truth in the report. Yesterday he had a warrant sworn out for the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. George Doyle, of Duryea, on a charge of furnishing libelous matter to a newspaper. The hearing was held in the evening before Alderman Loftus, Attorney William Gillespie appearing for the prosecution. Doyle was present, but his wife failed to appear, and he explained her absence by saying that a few days before the article appeared in the Scrantonian she started for Scranton with the intention of denying the truth of the article, but a detective on the car, learning of her mission, had her put off the car, and as a result she is now confined to a newspaper in the Scrantonian and that the horses became frightened and ran away, going over the bank at the bridge in the darkness.

Little and O'Toole, of the Scrantonian, were present, and the former took the stand and swore that the DoYLES and two other men came to his home in Scranton one night, and showed him from bed and offered to tell the story of the Corcoran case for $200. Doyle admitted being at the house, but denied that he said Gilboy had bought chloroform. He says he never received a cent for his information. On cross-examination Attorney Gillespie succeeded in having Doyle admit that his wife's information was not always reliable. Doyle was held under $500 bail for his appearance at court.

DEEP HOLLOW DISCOVERY.

Farmer Truax Uncovers Bones of Various Kinds.

Special to The Scranton Tribune.

Susquehanna, Oct. 4.—While out in the hills chesnutting on Monday, a farmer named Truax, in the Deep Hollow section, found a hole in the base of a hill, and proceeded to make an investigation. Reaching in, he grasped something in his hand, which proved to be the long bone of a human being. His curiosity now being very much excited, he procured assistance and commenced digging. After digging some distance, they came to a large stone slab on edge, closing the mouth of a cavern about ten by twelve feet square and six feet high. On the floor lay bones in large number, some human, but the larger portion were bones of different species of animals. Some of them were in a good state of preservation, and could easily be named and classified, while others crumbled to dust on being exposed to the air. Bones of wild cats, of rabbits and of dogs were found, while bones of some larger animals could not be classified, though they are supposed to belong to the larger species of animals, such as panthers, catamounts, bears, etc.

THE LIGHT THAT SAVES.

One dark night during the siege of Santiago Harbor a boat darted out under cover of darkness to launch its deadly missile against an American vessel. If she had struck she would have gone to the bottom. What saved her? Was it her big 13-inch guns? No, it was her search-light, the dazzling white beam of light that shot straight out like a sword thrust through the darkness, revealed the approaching danger.

What is it that saves thousands of men from death every day in the year when the deadly foe of disease is creeping unperceived upon them? It is the white light of science, the educated understanding that reveals the source of danger and indicates the exact point of attack.

While the ordinary doctor gropes around, with the feeble tallow-candle light of unaided, conventional, routine treatment, a physician like Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., instantly illuminates the subject with the clear day-light ray of practical knowledge, the irresistible search-light of advanced and life-sustaining science.

"I was afflicted for four years," says John P. Ziegler, Esq., of No. 2 Lafayette St., Amsterdam, N. Y., in an earnest letter to Dr. Pierce. "My wife was extremely weak and unable to work at all, and after much hesitation, I wrote you. I am very happy to state that your advice has done me great good. You advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and also his Pleasant Pellets. I must here state that they have cured me. I wish to thank you most heartily for what you did for me. All suffering has vanished and I have gained about twenty pounds in weight. I used only one bottle of Golden Medical Discovery and one vial of the Pellets."

The wagon was found to be owned by the Anthracite Brewing company at Kingston. THE MARKETS.

Wall Street Review.

New York, Oct. 4.—Today's stock market was dull but firmer than that of yesterday. Heavy railroads were the feature of nearly a point and a few exceed that figure. A number of the active industrials gained 2 to 3 points and Pullman closed 5 points higher on the day. There was an appreciable relaxation in the stringency of call money, and expressed hopes of easier conditions at an early period. This, combined with excellent traffic returns from railroads and the general prosperous conditions of business added to the unwillingness of holders to part with securities. Offerings were on a very light scale, all day, in spite of the continued high rate for money up to delivery hour.

Borrowers satisfied their needs early in the day and the rate fell to 4 per cent, towards the close of the market. This invited a rather active buying movement in the late afternoon and in some cases there was an upward drift and from shorts causing some sudden jumps in prices. The closing generally was firm though slightly below the best. Total sales, 25,200 shares. The bond market was dull but firm in some stocks. Government bonds unchanged.
