At The Gaiety.

A crowded house greeted the Butterfly Extravaganza company last night at the Gaiety Theatre. The performance opened with a farce called "A Quick Lunch," and closed with auother called "The Butterfly Seminary.

The olio presented Miss Dora Busch a comely young lady with a pleasing baritone voice, who rendered several fine selections in an admirable manner. She was followed by the Archer sisters, Helen and Florence, in a comedy sketch. Phillips and Naynow, billed as tropical bird exhibitors, came next and proved what time and perseverance will do toward educating feathered bineds.

Wills and Collins in an up-to-date version of Pygmalion and Galatea were entertaining. The Eldridges, one of the cleverest teams of colored sketch artists on the vaudecille stage today, closed the olio. A well attended "mid-night matinee" was given to accommodate the firemen who were otherwise engaged earlier in the evening

Frederick the Great.

With the death of Frederick the Great, on Aug. 17, 1786, there passed outside the portals of the world's activity one of the greatest and yet least understood characters ever recorded in history. A man whose life was an enigma, whose nature was a composite of diametrically opposed forces and whose moods were as varied as the hues of the rainbow. A man, who, in public affairs, possessed indomitable what made the little girl's eyes sparkle courage, great administrative ability, Indefatigable industry and expert economic tactics, who was a soldier, a patriot and a statesman and yet whose domestic life was one of sorrow, disappointment and indifference.

If the sins of the father are visited upon the children, here was a deplorable exampley A youth permeated with vivacity and amiability, crushed in a few years to wear the visor of affection for one who never kindled love and in another few years to display an erratic and sarcastle arrogance that became most distatseful to all who were brought into conference with him. "Frederick the Great," as presented by Lewis Morrison, is at that age when nature commences to mellow the faculties and experience gives stability to thought. The character is eleverly drawn and excellently executed by this eminent actor, who is always so thorough in all he does. He will be seen at the Lyceum tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening.

HOW ANTS MAKE SLAVES.

Warrior Ants Which Enslave the Small and Weaker Species. From the Strand.

The warrior ant is a slave-making species. It is a large red kind, and it makes raids against nests of the small yellow turf ant, a mild and docile race, large numbers of which it carries off to act as servants.

But it does not steal fully grown turf ants. Their habits are formed and they would be useless for such purpose. What the warrior ant wants is raw material, which can be turned into thoroughly well-trained servants. So it merely kills the adult ants which strive to oppose its aggression and contents itself with trundling home to its own nest the larvae and pupae of the turi ants which it has put to flight and vanouished.

In time these grubs and cocoons pro duce full-grown yellow workers, which can be taught by the warrior ants to net as nurses and housemaids. I once saw in a garden in Algiers a great pitched battle going on between slave makers and the family of the future slaves, in which the ground was strewn with the corpses of the vanquished. Not till the nests of the smaller anta were almost exterminated did they retire from the unequal contest and allow the proud invader to carry off their brothers and sisters in their cocoons, asleep and unconscious. Occasonally, by dint of mere numbers, they beat the invader with heavy loss; but much more often the large and strongjawed warriors win the day and destroy to a worker the opposing forces. They crush their adversaries' heads with their vice-like mandibles. Meanwith their vice-like mandibles. Mean-while within the nest the other half of the workers—the division told off as $1.000. Inquire this office, A. R. C. special nurses-are otherwise employed in defending and protecting the rising generation. At the first alarm, at the first watchword passed with waving antennae through the nest, "A warrior host is attacking us," they hurry to the chambers where the cocoons are stored and bear them off in their mouths into the recesses of the nest, the lowest and most inaccessible of all the chambers.

CURIOUS CHILDISH PRACTICE.

There was a little girl on the street cars esterday who was acting very queerly. That is, certain "grown ups" who have orgotten the ways of little girls seemed o think so. She was sitting very quietly eside her mother, but her bright eyes were watching the streets closely for something. Every now and then they would sparkle and she made a queer little gesture. She touched the end of her p her fist struck it into the palm of her ther hand.

"Ninety-five," she said under her breath. "Ninety-six. Ninety-seven." Each ime making the gesture. What could the child be doing?

Just where little girls learn some things is a question. Probably from their grown-up sisters or other little girls' grown-up sisters. However it may be, there is a way whereby little girls can tell who their future husbands are going to be. They get together and agree to count white horses until they get 100. Then they must see three white mules, and after that the first young man who meets them is the fated one. Just how the neeting takes place is a matter of previous arrangement among the little girls. It may be the first one who shakes hands with them or who opens the door for hem or who gives them something.

Then, of course, there is the contest of seeing who will get the 100 horses first-to say nothing of the mules. That was "Only three more. Just think, mamma.

Then the mules. I'm beating the other girls all to pieces."—Kansas City Journal.
