SERMON ON PARADISE BY REV. J. P. MOFFAT.

Rev. J. P. Moffat, pastor of the Washburn street Presbyterian church, last evening preached the first sermon in the series on Paradise. He took his text from the second chapter in the Given," and referred to the creation ferred to Adam's creation and the evolution of man, dwelling particularly, on the fact that the physical body came of dust and to dust it must return. He also contrasted man's creation and the animal creation and pictured the spiritual nature, the body being only a casket, as it were, containing precious jewels.

Rev. Moffat also referred to the compound nature of the physical and spiritual life, and spoke of how God patterned man after his own image, and the moral power and feeling attending He referred to the tree of life and the tree of knowledge, and said in the former there is a permanent line set separating the obedient from the disobedient, and in the latter the consciousness of good and eveil. We are too anxious about things that are hidden and should draw away the screen which prevents us from seeing materfal things.

"There are trees in every home, life and heart, he said, and one broken branch will result in death to the spinitual body. No matter how pure and will amount to naught in the world the teachings of God's word, our lives will amount o naught in the world to come. The speaker took occasion to ask what benefits Scranton received from the firemen's convention, and during the course of his remarks said:

There are firemen and firemen, and while I look through rose-colored classes at many things, I ask what benefit was received from the visit af the state convention to Scraaton? There were many fine tooking men in line, and the parade was pleasing to look upon, and I have no doubt there are many brave men among them who risk their lives to save others, but there was an element among them that was nothing short of being toughs.

The only one element that benefite! by their presence was the saloon, which | be held Thursday and Friday evenings is the stigma and curse today to fire-

Washington, Oct. 8.-The navy department made the first practical use of the $150,000 experimental yard with results which, if trustworthy will be reassuring to the shipbuilders now engaged in competition for the contracts for the six new cruisers known as the Denver class, authorized by the last congress. The design adoptd for these vesesis, which has met se ere criticism on all sides, both for its lack of speed and absence of protection fore and aft, representing the practice of the fifteen-year-old Atlanta class rather than modern progress, has not been favorably received by shipbuilds ers, who cannot see how such large vessels can be obtained within the amount of money available, congress having set aside $1,141,800 for each vesel, and stipulated that they should e "of about twenty-five hundred tons

The price of material has not only inreased, but the board of bureau chiefs increased this displacement by 1,000 tons, thereby cutting down the margin of profit to builders and reducing their speed to a very ordinary rate for these lass of fast ships. The speed was fixed at 1612 knots, with the provision that if it fell below 1614 knots and exreeded 15% knots the vessel would be accepted at a reduction of $25,000 juarter knot between 16 and 1516 knots, to make 15% knots.

Denver type has been exhaustively tested, with an announced complete victory over all criticisms as to projected speed. In the new United States model tank elaborate mechanism is provided by which a model can be dragged through the water at known velocities, while the pulling power exerted may be recorded with extreme precision. A perfeet model of any vessel can be made by the special machinery which has been set up, every curve of the ship's design being perfectly duplicated in minature scale. This model can be eighted to the exact trial displacement of the large vessel, with full allotment of coal, ammunition and men aboard, and there is no reason why it should not be possible to declare with exceeding refinement of accuracy just ing the vessel along the tank at var-
