CARBONDALE.

TRACTION CO. ORDINANCE.

Common council met last night, ordered a number of bills paid, adopted a resolution authorizing the Gamewell company to go ahead with their fire alarm work and passed two readings the bill amending the franchise of the Carbondate Traction company.

The ordinance amends the original ordinance, granting rights to the Traction company, as follows: The tracks of said railway shall be of the standard guage, viz., four (4) feet eight and one-half (815) inches, and the said Carbondate Traction company, upon the acceptance of the terms and conditions hereinafter named, and the execution of a contract embodying the same, are authorized and empowered change the gauge as aforesaid and lay their rails and tracks in accordance therewith, complying with all the contions named in said ordinance to which this is an amendment, except so far as the same is changed hereby.

The company shall repaye and repair all pavement upon paved streets, which may have been removed by said company, in the same condition as they found said street, and shall line the rails with molded bricks to conform to the shape of the rail.

Among the conditions exacted by the city is one requiring the company to pave seven and one-half feet of the street and put in six inches of con-

Also that the said Traction company shall bear and pay one-half the cost of the future maintenance and repair of bridges in said city, now maintained by said city, and over which said Traction company's railway passes.

The rails to be laid, in making said change, to be of the same weight and pattern, and method of laying the tracks to be the same as that being constructed in the city of Scranton on South Main avenue, between Washburn and Division streets.

The tracks to be laid in the centre of the street on Belmont street from Clark avenue to New York, Ontario and Western railway crossing, according to grade and centre stakes which shall be furnished by the city engineer of said city, upon request of said Traction

That the said company be allowed to place a switch on Brooklyn street, on condition that the said Traction company assume and pay all legal claims for damages that may grow out of the construction of said switch.

THEATRICAL.

Daniels as "The Ameer."

"The Ameer," the opera in which Frank Daniels will this season cause people to smile and forget their troubles, had its first presentation on any stage at the Lyceum last night before an audience that taxed the capacity of the house and was as responsive and enthusiastic as it was large. It was the unanimous verdict that "The Ameer" will be one of the successes of the present theatrical sea

The book was written by Frederic Ranken and Kirke LaShelle, Mr. Dantels' manager, and very clever it is The story is novel and interesting and the dialogue crisp and bright. Victor Herbert did the musical end of the opera so well that almost every number sung last night called forth an encore. With each succeeding opera Herbert seems to more thoroughly catch the spirit of light opera. The score of "The Ameer" is one of his most brilliant efforts. He occupied one of the boxes at the Lyceum last night and heard his opera sung. Across the house in another box were Messrs. Ranken and LaShelle. At the end of the second act there was a loud and clamorous demand for Daniels, and when the comedian came before the curtain he was given a splendid ovation. He bowed his thanks and pointing to the box where Herbert was modestly hid away behind the draperies, said, "That's the man you want, Then the audience turned Ruess." their attention to Herbert and Daniels made good his escape. The composer stood up in the box and bowed his acknowledgements of the ovation, but declined to say anything.

Mr. Daniels has the assistance of a fine company and probably the best chorous ever heard on the stage of the Lyceum. The leading members of the company are Helen Redmond, Norma Kopp, Kate Uart, Will Danforth. George Devoll, William Corliss and W. F. Rochester. The opera is staged and costumed in an exceptionally actistic manner. The blending of colors in the groupings of the principals and chorus during the three acts was truly beautiful. For a first production the opera moved with unusual smoothness. On account of the elaborate nature of the scenery and the consequent delays between acts the performance was not over until 11.30 last night. The story of the opera is as follows:

The Ameer of Afghanistan has been that wears a crown. An annual tax of one million rupees levied by the British government has forced him to the exfreme of marrying each year a wealthy wife, whose dower helps him over this tax reef. He has been very successful in this matter for ten years: but at last has exhausted the native supply, and his bamberlain has now had to contract for deventh victim. For ten years Betrothal day has been an established institution, and on this chosen day not only the Ameer, but all of his subjects must be

The American bride has been delayed and is expected to arrive on Betrothal day, when the opera opens. This is taking a greater risk than the Ameer relishes, as he will be unable to pay the million rupees unless he gets his bride's dower, and if it is not paid the military representative of the British government will depose the Ameer, cast him into a dungeon and assume control of the gov-ernment. Added to all this, the Ameer has a brother who is a pretender to the ie, and this ungrateful relative has tried in every way to have the Ameet has hired the royal cook to poison him, which ended in the hanging of the He has employed other persons to shoot him, the result being to cripple bystander, and in numerous ways he has aid traps for the Ameer, which, though unsuccessful, have so terrorized the Ameer that he is afraid to go out of his palace and fears for his life even there. In order to increase his revenues the Ameer has commissioned the Chamberlain to organize and operate a crimes bureau. under the firm name of Cut & Slach and has placed a brigand chief, Blaklak, in charge as manager. The Chamberlain learns that a large shipment of gold on its way to the Viceroy of India is to pass through the mountains, and summons Blakjak to meet him and receive in structions. Blakiak takes the order and confides in the Chamberlain, whom he knows only as "Mr. Slash," that he has secured a commission for a piece work that will make them all rich. has been employed by the Ameer's brother to assassinate the Ameer, and is to re-ceive therefor 5,000,000 rupees, which will enable them to retire from business This nearly floors the Chamberlain, who can't tell Blakjak that he has taken a ommission to murder his own employer. The American bride, Constance, arrives incognito with her friend, Fanny, both being disguised as boys. Constance has known and fallen in love with Ralph government at the Ameer's court, while Ralph was in America a year before, and has only apparently fallen in with her mother's plan to have her marry the Ameer in order that she might see Ralph. tal, has returned home, apparently not However, Ralph, who has heard of her much benefitted. The condition of James Puckey, who is suffering with appendicitis, is quite serious and it is thought an operation will be recognized by the condition of James Puckey, who is guerally honors is Mirzah, who is very rich, but whom the Chamberlain wants for himself, and to that end has kent her off the Ameer's list. Mirzah is des-perately in love with the Ameer and has been for years, but finds her devotion ignored. Because of her passion for the Ameer and because of his love for Constance, Ralph and Mirzah plan to pre-vent the Ameer's betrothal to the American girl by having Blakjak abduct her and hold her prisoner until Betrothal day has passed. The Ameer has seen Blakjak (though himself unseen) and con-ceives a tremendous admiration for him.

> sessinate the Ameer, he cannot rescue him, and at the close of the first act the Ameer is carried away to the forest by Blakjak as a prisoner.
> The second act is in the brigand's home The second act is in the brigand's home in the forest, and the Ameer is made the sport of the brigands, who permit him to think he is about to escape only to recapture him. This cat and mouse game gives the Ameer a lively time, and he gives the Ameer a lively time, and he finally agrees to join the brigands. Mirgah and Ralph come to see the capture of the American girl, and Ralph learns of the attempt to be made to capture the

This gives him an idea. Since it isn't safe for him to go about in his own proper person for fear of assassination, he determines to disguise himself as a fierce brigand and go and be in with the cap-ture of the vicercy's gold. Just as a little practice he terrorizes his subjects in his brigand get-up, and while he is chasing them about with knife and pistol, and they are shricking for protection, Blakjak comes on, takes the Ameer for a

Blakjak, who is yearning to find and as near to frustrate this attempt. Constance and Fanny appear on, the stene, Con-stance being enger to find Ralph and explain the seeming falsity of her engagement to the Ameer. Blakjak and Ralph seet Constance and Fanny, and the rec ognition of Constance by Ralph reveals he fact that the two apparent boys re girls. Blakiak falls in love with Fanny. The Chamberlain arrives just as he brigands are about to initiate the Ameer as a new member of the band, and saves him from a knifethrowing ordeal by announcing that the prisoner is their employer, Mr. Cut. The gold train is sighted and the brigands insist on being led to the fray by the Ameer. The capture is effected and the gold brought on, and the soldlers under Ralph attack the camp, capture the brigands and their stolen gold. Raipl recognizes the Ameer, and the Ameer finds it necessary to juggle rather skill-fully to keep his identity as the Ameer from being known to Blakjak and his onnection with the brigands unknown to Ralph. The third act is in the throne room of the palace, on the night of Betrothal day. The American bride has not arrived, and the Ameer is much exercised, as the British officer, Ralph, has served notice that unless the tax is paid by midnight, he will selze the palace and put the Ameer in a dungeon. The Ameer duces his court fool to exchange co umes with him and rule in his stead for few hours, and when Ralph demands the million rupees or the person of the Ameer, the fool sneaks away and resumes his fool costume. This puts two fools it vidence, and Ralph demands to know which is the Ameer. Mirzah, to whom al disguises are futile, appears and inno-cently betrays the Ameer, who then faces the situation. He determines to ret even in the few minutes that remain end is about to behead the Chamberlain when Mirzah, who in despair at winning he Ameer has accepted the Chamber ain, pleads for his life. The Chamber lain tells the Ameer that Mirzah is rich and offers to resign her to him and thus save him. The Ameer accepts and begins to speak the irrevocable betrothal. The 'hamberlain rushes on, dragging Con-nance, whom he has discovered to be he American bride, and endeavors to op the Ameer in time, but the Ameet nishes the betrothal and Constance i safe. Blakjak is pardoned and Fanny undertakes to reform him, and Raiph and Constance are happily paired, the meer being content with Mirsah and his throne.

The opera will be produced a Wilkes-Barre tonight.

"The Sleeping City."

One of the A. Q. Scammon melodramas, "The Sleeping City," opened a three days' engagement at the Academy of Music last evening, before good-sized house. It is an elaborately staged performance, replete with thrilling incidents, and presented by a capable company, including Nellie Daly. Clara M. Langley, Tom Flynn, Rogers Barker and Lester and Davis. For a popular-priced show it is exceptionally

The Tuxedo Club.

"A Tony Time at Tuxedo" is the title an up-to-date burlesque on the boards at the Gaiety, which allows full scope for the antics of funny characters; for the rendition of popular songs; and for the display of pretty faces and shapely forms. Among the specialty features worthy of note were the songs of John F. Clark; the boxing and acrobatic sketch of the Fantas; the dancing acts of Walt Terry and Nellie Elmer; and the performance of John R. Harty, the eccentric juggler. Miss May B. Thorndyke, the vivacious souprette, also won much applause by her rendition of coon songs. The star number, however, was given by Margaret Rosa and Vera Harte and the Dutch pickaninnies. Miss Harte possesses a resonant so prano voice of quality seldom heard in burlesque. Her interpretation of the prayer from "Cavalleria Rusticana" was artistic and received generous rec ognition at each performance yesterday. The Tuxedo club will be seen at the Gaiety this afternoon and evening and tomorrow matinee and evening.
