FARMER GOODRICH'S ADVENTURE WITH A WILD CAT.

A Few Echoes from the Railroads. Prosperous Year of the Delaware and Hudson—A Poem About Jimmie and Jack—Political Pot in Susquehanna.

Special to The Scranton Tribune. Susquehanna, Oct. 26.—Farmer Leon Goodrich, of Elkland, had a dangerous adventure on Tuesday. He heard a great commotion in the barn, where he kept a young Holstein bull. The animal was bellowing as if in great pain, and now and then came savage screams and fierce snarling. Goodrich thought a large dog had got into the barn and was worrying the bull, and hurried to the spot. On opening the barn door, he was astounded to see a large wildcat, with its fangs buried in the bull's nostrils, while another wildcat, nearly as large, was tearing at the animal's flank. The bull was rushing about in the enclosure, bellowing in pain, and trying in vain to shake the wildcat from his nose, although he dashed the tenacious beast time and again against the side of the barn.

The door of the enclosure opened in a small barnyard, and when the farmer recovered from his surprise, he flung the door open, and without a thought of the peril he might place himself in, he sprang to the aid of the bull. Goodrich seized the cat that was fastened to the bull's nose, and it at once released its hold and turned upon the farmer and attempted to get at his throat. The farmer, struggling with the infuriated animal that had turned from the bull to him, and backed to the door, pushed it open and sprang to the yard, quickly followed by the bull and the other cat. Blood was flowing from the bull's nose and from the numerous wounds in the flank, neck and side where the wildcats had torn the flesh with their long, sharp teeth. Once in the yard the bull stunned the wildcat, quickly followed by the bull and the other cat. Blood was flowing from the bull's nose and from the numerous wounds in the flank, neck and side where the wildcats had torn the flesh with their long, sharp teeth.

IN ALDERMANIC COURT.

Various Cases Tried and Sentences Given Yesterday. Charlie McGuire, Michael Oshero, John and Joe Sabino, the small boys caught in the act of stealing fruit from E. G. Cousen's store, were tried before Alderman Howe yesterday morning. The boys were severely reprimanded on a warning that they would not be guilty of the offence again, were discharged.

RAILROAD ECHOES.

The Susquehanna shoppes will be paid Thursday for services in September. In the aggregate about $20,000. The report that the Erie will abolish mileage books and make a general two-cent rate, lacks foundation in fact. It may come—but not in this year of grace. During the season the Erie has greatly improved its road bed and rolling stock. The Erie was never more prosperous than at present. It could use to advantage a great many more locomotives and cars. The Delaware and Hudson has a wonderfully successful and prosperous year, in every respect. It is a grand old road, and it is deserving of all its great success. Its men are always contented and loyal.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE.

A Susquehanna mother sent her daughter to a drug store for a bottle of Jayne's Expectant. When she called for "Jane's Experience," the clerk just yelled.

ARCHITECT DAVIS IS HERE.

Y. M. C. A. Prize Winner Will Make Slight Changes in Plans. Seymour Davis, of Philadelphia, the architect whose plans for the new Y. M. C. A. buildings won first prize, was in the city yesterday and talked matters over with Secretary Mahy, of the local association. It was decided to make several minor changes in the plans and Mr. Davis took them back with him to Philadelphia for this purpose. When they are again received they will be printed in the form of a neat prospectus which will be used in soliciting subscriptions
