WHAT BABY SHOULD EAT.

A Mother Tells How She Saved Her Delicate Baby's Life.

We publish this letter for the information of mothers who have found it hard to get a really good food that is always the same, is liked by and agrees with the baby: "Dear Sir—Our baby was living between life and death when I read that one ounce of Cook's Flaked Rice contained 21 per cent. more of life-giving nourishment than one pound of beef and one pound of potatoes combined. The idea immediately occurred to me, 'Why wouldn't this be good for my baby?' I tried it, and we have a well, healthy baby, and I know if you would only advise your friends to use Cook's Flaked Rice as well as a Breakfast Food, you would save a great many babies, as you have our dear little boy." "I found Rice to be the best way of cooking Flaked Rice for babies: Two quarts of water, bring to a boil, add one quart of Rice, bring to a boil, and boil from eight to ten minutes, stirring thoroughly. It is just like milk. I honestly believe I have had more experience with baby foods than any one. My baby's health was absolutely ruined until I tried Cook's Flaked Rice, as above, and I thoroughly believe it is the most nourishing and agreeable to the stomach of any baby food. It is easily digested, and does not curdle in the stomach." "MRS. LEONIE SIMONS, 'Mt. Clemens, Mich.' Cook's Flaked Rice (which is sold by all our grocers) is never advertised as an infant's food, but it is used the same as any other baby food. It is much purer and better, as it is the best Rice scientifically prepared.

When the excitement was somewhat over, it was found that both wagons were completely demolished and both horses in a sorry plight. Mr. Spencer's horse having continued the flight of the former. It was caught on North Blakely street, but not until it was severely cut in several places.
