KILLED BY A TRAIN.

Stroudsburg Nov. 9-Train due in East Stroudsburg on the Delaware. Lackawanna railroad at 9:24 a. m. run down and killed an unknown man near Spragueville. The man was walking down the track and was this end of the high bridge when No. 172 thundered along. The engine struck the man in the back and hurled him against the rocky side of a cut. Instead of stopping to look after the man as the rule requires the train came on to Spragueville and notified the employes there of the accident. The remains were rought to the station at that place and put in the freight house. The unfortunate was probably 45 years old weighing about 150 pounds and between five feet and eight inches tall. His nose was small and a sandy bear ! covers his jaw. His moustache is

New York, Nov. 9--A general disposition to liquidate in speculative holdings was manifest in the slock market today. Early in the day some general strength was marifested which was due primarily to the higher quotations cabled from London and which was sided by strength in special clocks, but the growing stiffness of noney and the total absence of any outside buying demand discouraged the bull element and they were sellers of the whole list as the day advanced. The closing of the market was easy and near the low price of the day for most stocks. An incident of the day was the demand for silver certificates at a sharp advance. Total sales, 747,500 shares.
