LASSOED A BUCK. Exciting Experience of William Worthing in Pike County

Susquehanna, Nov. 16.—William Worthing, of Sherman, who is a former Montana cowboy, has been sitting near Shohola had a queer adventure on Wednesday. Worthing, who is an unerring twister of the lasso, went on the hills in search of some foxes. His dog went up a ravine and Worthing arranged his lasso and awaited events. The dog began to bark and then, instead of the expected fox, came two deer, with the dog at their heels. Worthing promptly urged his horse forward, twisting the lasso and in an instant the rope encircled the neck and horns of a big buck. Then commenced a terrific struggle. The buck tried at first to break away and then to gore the horse and Worthing had a lively time in trying to circumvent him, as he had dropped his gun in the scuffle. The dog also took a hand, but it was not until after half an hour's hard struggle that the buck surrendered and was dispatched. Quite a number of Worthing's Susquehanna county friends are eating venison today.

TALE OF A SNAKE THAT LOVED MUSIC

The Reptile Dwelt in a Church in Schuylkill County, So the Chronicle Goes, and Learned to Play the Organ.

From the Pittsburg Times. A party of musicians the other day were discussing the question of the love of music among various animals, and particularly among snakes. The majority of them denied that snakes in particular had any idea of music and scouted the thing as absurd and impossible, when one of them offered to relate a story from his own experiences that would convince them on the point at issue.

As he was reputed to be a good story teller his companions agreed to hear the evidence, however much they might doubt the correctness of his theories.

"I was the organist in a little country church near the Blue mountains in Schuylkill county. The mountains were full of snakes. I used often to go out in the woods and take my cornet along just to have a little music and practice by myself.

"One day I was sitting on a log by a spring, playing softly and hardly thinking what I was doing, when I suddenly saw a giant black snake very close to me coiled up and swaying his head to the rhythm of the tune I am not afraid of snakes and know this one to be as harmless as a kitten, so I was more amused than frightened, and continued to play a variety of airs for him to see the effect. He appeared to enjoy it immensely, and when I played something lively he seemed to become almost delirious in his exertions.

"If he had legs he would surely dance, and as it was, his motions were exceedingly graceful and his ideas of time excellent. His eyes shone with the pleasure it was giving him, and his forked tongue seemed to blaze in the ecstasy of his enjoyment. Suddenly I stopped and he seemed a very picture of sadness and disappointment. He crawled up to me and asked me to resume just as plainly as if he knew every word in the English language.

"The SNAKE FOLLOWED. "I suddenly occurred to me that it would be an interesting experiment to see if he would follow the music. So I began to play softly began to walk away. He followed me at once, and I led him along down to the church. When I unlocked the door, he followed me in without hesitation, and came right after me up into the organ loft. I then tried him with the organ, and he was even more delighted than with the cornet. Finding that he would never get enough of the music I was obliged to drive him away by main force.

"The next day I went into the church to practice and had not been long at it when I was startled by a hissing and rattling sound coming from the organ loft, and looking down, there was a terrible screeching and a rattling sound like that of a rattlesnake. I looked up just in time to see my friend, the snake, disappear with a screeching hiss and a rattling sound. I said nothing about my previous acquaintance with the reptile. You may imagine that it broke up the services for awhile, but finally everything quieted down and went on as usual.

"After that the snake came again for the next two or three weeks, but many weeks went by and he did not appear. It seems that he had become convinced that it was dangerous when others were present, so he never again entered the church during services, though doubtless he was listening at a safe point outside.

MYSTERIOUS MUSIC.

"Soon afterward members of the church reported that they had heard mysterious music coming from the organ at night in passing the church and inquired whether I was practicing. I assured them that I was not. This occurred several times, and as it could not be satisfactorily explained it aroused a deal of comment and some of the more superstitious began to whisper that the church was haunted and that the spirit of a former organist was at the bottom of it. As the mystery was beginning to tell on the nerves of the neighborhood, as well as on my own, I determined to ferret it out. The music would generally sound as if someone were touching the keys with one finger, although sometimes a number of keys would be depressed simultaneously; but whenever I would enter the church I would find no one there. The organ, however, would be open, though I had left it closed when I last used it.

"One evening I determined to make a night of it and solve the mystery if it was possible. I accordingly took up a concealed position in the church and waited until the music began to sound somewhat by the fact that the moon shone into the building and illuminated a small space around the organ. It was no sooner fully dark than I saw none other than my old friend the black snake wriggle his way up the music stool. He was not alone, but was followed by half a dozen or more of his companions, who formed a shiny black mass upon the stool. You can imagine that I was amazed as I had never before, but I resolved to await developments. The next move I noticed was that all the snakes, apparently under the direction of the organist, would raise their heads against the lid, and pushing all together it went up as easily as if I had lifted it myself. Then all the other snakes got down. His musical snakeship then let down a coil and grasped the lever that started the water motor that did the pumping, and everything was ready.

"THE CONCERT ENDS. "Then, seated coiled on the stool, he began to press the keys with his head, and of course produced the corresponding notes on the instrument. Sometimes to vary this he would jump bodily upon the bank of keys and wiggle along, producing a most weird and curious jumble of sounds. As he proceeded he became more and more excited and violent, and the other snakes danced and writhed around until I could imagine what it must be to have delirium tremens. I was so interested that I let them go on for a full hour, when suddenly making a noise they all scurried away. I pretended to the members of the congregation that I had not found out what it was and thus was enabled to enjoy this novel spectacle on several succeeding evenings. When I finally told them no one would believe me, and I think that it was partly on this account that I soon after lost my place. However, by placing a lock on the organ and stopping up all the holes by which the snakes could enter the church, I put an end to the nocturnal concerts, and, though I was sure that the ghosts, or whatever it was, had come to walk. After such an experience nobody can convince me that snakes do not have a love of music and a taste for it."

A TERRIBLE PRISON.

Growsome Places in the Wall That Surrounds Old Manila.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Ralph S. Gehrett, a young Jefferson county soldier with Company C, Twentieth Kansas, has written an interesting letter home to a friend, telling of a visit to a Spanish dungeon. While on duty in Manila, after active service in the Philippines, he took it upon himself to make a few excursions in the investment of subterranean prisons, constructed over 400 years ago. Private Gehrett, in his letter, under date of July 25, says:

"I must tell you something about the walls that surround and fortify the city. They were built by Gomez Dacuna in 1590, and are today, although covered with moss and creeping vines, in a good state of preservation, and with their parapets, moats, ponderous gates and drawbridges, constitute a most curious relic of the middle ages. The walls are built by masonry and are very thick. The dungeons, secret passages and rooms with which the old wall is honey-combed.
