The New York Journal had the fellowing story yesterday about the case: "James Buckley and Thomas Hackway, laborers, occupying a furnished room in the apartments of Mrs. Annie Kelly, at No. 201 East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, were asphyxlated by gas escaping from a heater early yesterday morning.

"About 7 o'clock yesterday morning John Houlihan, also a boarder, smelled gas, and tracing the oder to the room of the other men, discovered them dead in bed together. Surgeon Blackmar, summoned from Harlem hospital with an ambulance, said the men had been dead for several hours.

"Patrolman Irving, of the East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street police station, who was called in, found that the rubber tube connecting the heater with the gas jet was disconnected from the heater sufficiently to allow a large quantity of gas to escape during the night. The windows being closed the men soon were suffocated."

The information received by Buckley's brother stated that the body would not be shipped here until temorrow morning, after the coroner's inquest, The remains will be removed to his late home, and the funeral will occur Thursday, Interment will be made in Cathedral cemetery.

In consequence City Engineer Phil-lips, Street Commissioner Rowland D. Thomas, Select Councilman Simon Thomas, Common Councilmen William V. Griffiths, and Charles Schlager, president of the land company, will visit the street today and establish a grade. The land taken to widen the street was donated to the city by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company before the tract was purchased by the West Park company.
