WESALOFSKIE MISSING.

A Pittston Polander Thought to Have Been Drowned. Special to the Scranton Tribune. Pittston, Dec. 1.—Andrew Wesalofskie, a single man aged about 35 years, a Polander who boarded with his sister on Luzerne avenue, West Pittston, has been missing since last Saturday and his relatives fear that he may be connected with the incident that occurred on the Ferry bridge last Monday morning. Wesalofskie has not been seen at his boarding house since last Saturday night, when he went to Pittston. On Sunday night he was in a saloon on North Main street drinking and playing cards. According to the story told by his sister, Wesalofskie, in company with another Polander named William Serandus, who lives in Frogtown, left the saloon about 4 a. m. Wesalofskie started for his home in West Pittston by way of the Ferry bridge. Serandus accompanied him a short distance on the bridge and then left him and Serandus started for his home in East Pittston. As Serandus reached the end of the bridge he heard his late companion yell for help and then heard a splash, but he paid no attention to it and went on his way home. Both men were under the influence of liquor, he said. Nothing further could be learned.

BOILER HOUSE WRECKED.

The Explosion of a "Nest" at Inkerman—No One Injured. Special to the Scranton Tribune. Pittston, Dec. 1.—The boiler house at No. 5 colliery of the Pennsylvania Coal company at Inkerman, exploded with a loud report about 11.30 this morning, and that no one was killed or injured is almost miraculous. There were six cylinder boilers in the house, divided into two nests, and the outer two boilers of the nest exploded. The boilers broke in the middle, the fronts being pushed out through the front of the fireman's room. The rear half of the boilers with the woodwork of the house were thrown high in the air and landed in a field about 100 feet away. The four remaining boilers were loosened from their fastenings. William Evans, with a gang of masons were building a brick engine house within fifty feet of the boilers and they were not struck by the flying bricks and timber which filled the air, scattering in all directions. It is indeed surprising that there was no one in the boiler house at the time. The fireman, fortunately, had just stepped into the engine room nearly on an errand and was just about to return when the explosion occurred. Work at the colliery was immediately suspended and the inside employees taken from the mine.

THE MARKETS.

Wall Street Review. New York, Dec. 1.—The stock market today was colorless. Professional operations were responsible for whatever movement took place, and change on the account were not well maintained owing to the desire of the professionals to close up their contracts at once. The organized buying of the trunk lines and some other stocks, which was in evidence in the earlier part of the week seemed to be entirely discontinued, and those stocks reacted on profit taking.
