FULL STORY OF THE MAYFIELD ROBBERY

BEING TOLD BY WITNESSES OF COMMONWEALTH.

Dalton Was Positively Identified as One of the Men Who Assisted in Looting the Office of the Carbondale Traction Company—The Flight of the Men After the Robbery and the Battle at Ararat Summit Described in Detail—Other Cases Heard.

In setting forth the commonwealth's story of the Mayfield burglary, District Attorney John R. Jones' task is to show that the six men who robbed the power house are the same six men who had the encounter with "Bill" Leach, at Ararat, of which latter six the defendants are unquestionably four.

To prove this he is developing the case step by step, following the movements of the burglars, tracing them from the power house to the Ontario and Western tracks, along these tracks to Carbondale, and thence along the Erie road to Ararat Summit.

Most of yesterday morning was taken up with a presentation of the incidents at the power station and the departure of the burglars. A map prepared by Eli Nicholson, of Jermyn, a clerk in the Traction company's office, showing the power station and its surroundings, was admitted in evidence, after which Engineer Frank Coggins and Night Clerk W. R. Brokenshire testified to their encounter with the burglars, which was practically the same as the story given by Fireman Patrick Dempsey the day before.

DALTON IDENTIFIED. Coggins identified Dalton as the man who came running from the window room through the corridor and out the rear way when one of the departing burglars called out "Come on, Paddy."

Both Dempsey and Coggins say the man wore no mask and that there was a light in the corridor. On cross-examination it was brought out that it was not necessary for the burglars to use force in entering the office, as the door was unlocked.

Brokenshire and W. S. Wagner, a motorman, testified that one of the burglars followed the former to the bunk room at the power station and tried to force an entrance. The conductors and motormen who occupied the bunk room placed coats against the door and prevented the burglar from opening the door more than six or eight inches. The burglar called out, "Brokenshire, where are you?" Brokenshire answered, "I'm in here." The burglar admonished him to stay there and then descended the stairs. Mr. Brokenshire said.

Elias Cobb, one of the motormen, avers that he took Brokenshire's revolver, followed the burglar to the stairs and opened fire on the gang. The burglars returned the fire, and Cobb, having exhausted his ammunition, retreated.

General Manager Flynn, of the Carbondale Traction company, identified photographs of the power station and gave an oral description of the premises, after which court adjourned for the noon recess.

CORROBORATIVE TESTIMONY. At the opening of the afternoon session District Attorney Jones called P. J. Flannery, Frank Dittmore, J. P. Hoyt and John Philbin, some trolley car hands who were in the bunk room. They corroborated the preceding witness in the incidents in which they were chiefly concerned and told of how one of the burglars, who was guarding the rear door, fired at two of the trolley car men, who popped their heads out of the upstairs window. Two of them testified to having watched the burglar depart; that there were six in the party and that after going about 400 feet up the road in the direction of Carbondale took a sidetrack leading to the Ontario and Western tracks.

Deputy Warden George Pryor testified that a duplex cash register issued by the Erie road was found on the person of Dalton, when he was searched at the county jail. Conductor Martin Murphy who issued the ticket identified it and also recognized Dalton as the man to whom it was issued. He said Dalton got on his train at Susquehanna on the afternoon of Saturday, March 25, to go to Carbondale. As his train was bound for Binghamton, he told Dalton he was going the wrong way and advised him to get off at Hancock. Dalton got off at Hancock.

Constable E. J. Neary, the prosecutor, was called to prove that the defendants gave fictitious names when taken into custody, but O'Brien & Kelly objected to the ground that this was not an evidence of guilt, it being only natural that any man who falls into the clutches of the law would endeavor to conceal his right name.

NOTHING TO PREVENT IT. Judge Edwards agreed with the defendant's counsel that he knew of nothing in the law that would permit of the introduction of this testimony. District Attorney Jones, at this juncture, entered upon the pursuit of the fugitives.

Conductor Thomas Moran, of the Ontario and Western road, told that his train was in the "caboose" switch at Mayfield waiting orders on the morning of the burglary, about 1.30 o'clock, when five or six men came along the railroad walking rapidly in the direction of Carbondale. They were dressed in black clothes. When his train reached Carbondale at 2.45 Constable Neary and other parties boarded it. Looking across to the Erie tracks some 300 feet away, he saw six men crossing Wilson's creek on the railroad. After going a short distance, the six men left the railroad and took to the wagon road for the distance of about 400 feet, when they again took to the Erie tracks. He lost sight of them.

On cross-examination by Mr. Kelly, the witness admitted that he could not identify the men whom he saw at Mayfield as the men seen at Wilson's creek.

On re-direct examination it was elicited that the men left the Erie tracks, when the pusher on the Ontario and Western train was cut loose, and started back to Carbondale for Chief McAndrew.

A SIMILAR STORY. William Davis and Harry Bernhardt, brakemen on Conductor Moran's train, told a similar story. Michael Clifford, who lives along the Ontario and Western road about a mile and a quarter above the Mayfield yard, was called and testified that he was ill the night of the burglary; that he was aroused by the barking of his dog and looking out the window he saw six men hurrying past in the direction of Carbondale. Mr. Clifford, however, when put on the stand, proved very much of a disappointment. He answered in the negative when asked questions tending to bring out this story.

Constable Neary was recalled and told of his chase after the gang. He boarded Conductor Moran's train between Carbondale and Mayfield, and took a place on the "pusher" engine. At Carbondale Chief of Police James T. McAndrew and Patrolman William McAndrew were picked up. Word was received here that six men were seen in the Carbondale yard heading northward.

Constable Neary continued on the train, while the two McAndrews dropped off at West Carbondale. When the Ontario and Western train arrived at Simpson, six men were sighted on the Erie tracks across the river, four hundred feet distant. They were standing where the trolley road crosses the Erie tracks. Constable Neary had the train stopped and the pusher cut loose to return with him to secure Chief McAndrew and other help.

THE MEN DISAPPEARED. When the six men saw the pusher starting back they left the railroad, took to the plank road and disappeared around the Franklin breaker.

The Ontario and Western trainmen told of the same six men re-appearing a few minutes later about four hundred feet up the track, hurrying northward.

Here the chase was transferred to the Erie tracks. George H. Dimmick, a clerk in the Erie office, testified that about 3.30 in the morning his train stopped at Bracebrook, a short distance above Forest City, to do some switching and that when Constable Neary and the Erie trainmen told of the same six men re-appearing a few minutes later about four hundred feet up the track, hurrying northward.

The conductor had telegraphed ahead to Ararat and when the train stopped there, Bill Leach and Jessa Wall were waiting it. The six men scurried out of the car and started to retreat down the track. When Leach and his rifle appeared from around the engine the gang began to edge over towards the swamp skirting the railroad. Leach called upon them to halt.

FORMED A SEMI-CIRCLE. They halted, but only to form in a semi-circle and fire a volley from their pistols at Leach, who was only fifteen or twenty feet away. One of the gang, Barry, raised his revolver, took deliberate aim at Leach and fired. The witness shouted to Leach "to look out." Leach evidently had seen the leveled revolver for the warning to "look out" the report of the pistol and the crack of Leach's rifle were simultaneous. Barry dropped with his smoking pistol in his hand and a 38-calibre rifle ball in his brain.

Glanman and Cummings had some difficulty in getting across the wire fence enclosing the swamp and were brought to bay. Cummings stood upright, raised his long revolver in the hollow of his bent, left arm and aimed point blank at Leach. He fired but the bullet missed and he was only fifteen or twenty feet away. When the witness called to him not to shoot at the men were wounded, Leach lowered his gun. They made no resistance when Leach and the trainmen went to take them into custody.

DISAPPEARED OVER HILL TOP. The two men who were first to get over the fence disappeared over the hill top on a run. The sixth man, the one who is still at large, and who appeared to be the leader, walked down to the rear end of the train, rested his hand on the side of a car and for a minute or two intently watched the stirring scenes that were being enacted at the forward end of the train. When he saw Barry dead and Cummings and Gaughan disabled, he turned slowly away and walked down the track, looking back occasionally to see if he was pursued. He disappeared into the woods and has never been heard from. It is believed he was wounded in the hand.

When the direct examination of Dimmick was concluded court adjourned for the day.

Other Cases Heard. Both parties to one of the cases tried before Judge Biddle, in quarter sessions yesterday, came to court as follow-passengers in the "Black Maria." William Fennell was the defendant and Mary Sheehan the prosecutrix. Fennell had been in jail for three months awaiting trial on charges of assault and battery and making threats, preferred by Mrs. Sheehan. The latter, with her daughter, was sent up thirty days ago for disorderly conduct.

Fennell lived upstairs in a house on the South Side occupied by Mrs. Sheehan. They had a quarrel, which resulted in a fight. Fennell, it appears, got the worst of it, but Mrs. Sheehan reached the "squire's" office first and Fennell went to jail as defendant in an assault and battery case and a surety case.

The jury, however, was less than five minutes in acquitting Fennell and putting the costs on the prosecutrix. When Harry Goodrich, Joseph Feury, Thomas Smith and John Wright were arraigned for breaking into Zerich's dyeing establishment and taking away three pairs of gloves, the first pleaded guilty and exonerated the others, who, although with them, had no hand in the theft. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of Smith and John Wright.

Frank Benjamin pleaded guilty to the charge of defrauding a boarding house, preferred by E. Russell, and Judge Edwards let him off with a fine of $1 and costs.

In the case in which James Watson, William H. Parker, David Parker and William Owens were charged with assault and battery upon Thomas Harris, of Parker street, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty, placing two-thirds of the costs on Walsh and David Parker and one-third on the prosecutrix.

George Henry, charged by Thomas Bray with larceny and receiving, pleaded guilty and was sent to the Huntington reformatory. George Baker, his fellow-defendant, was acquitted. The false pretense case of Belford Harris against Lizzie Lahotsky was on trial before Judge Biddle at adjournment.

Dunmore Borough Sued. Dunmore borough was sued yesterday for $5,000 damages by John Carvay, of Quincy avenue, who wants that his boy should have $10,500 and himself $5,000 for a lamed arm and sprained back, which resulted to the lad from a fall into a gully on Quincy avenue. Cornelius Smith and J. Stanley Smith are his attorneys.

Marriage Licenses. James O'Donnell, 2402 Pittston avenue Della Conway, Wilkes-Barre.

Court House News Notes. Reasons for a new trial in the Smith-Loomis case were yesterday filed by the plaintiff's counsel.

Court yesterday approved the bond of John Murray, constable of the Second ward of Olyphant, Michael Bosak and James W. O'Brien were his sureties.
