A COMPLICATED PROCESS.

The manufacture of wall paper requires elaborate machinery. From the Philadelphia Times.

The manufacture of wall paper is singularly interesting. First, a web of blank paper is set in a reel behind a blotting machine; two cylinders are ready to catch the paper into the machine, where a roller working in a color pan puts a large quantity of color upon the paper in blotches. Then a set of flat brushes, called jiggers, brush quickly back and forth, thus spreading the coloring matter evenly over the surface of the paper.

The paper comes from the blotting machine a workman takes one end of it, wraps it around a stick and places the stick across two parallel endless chains, and the paper is thus carried up an incline. When the paper reaches the top of the incline, it is transferred to rollers of the size required. It is necessary to prepare as many rollers as there are colors in the design; thus, if the design requires printing in eight colors eight rollers must be prepared.

When his work is finished, the roller bears on its face, in raised brass, green stems, leaves, etc., and at the proper time and place will put the green coloring and shading just where the designer intended it should be. In like manner the other rollers are made ready for use, and they are then taken to a press that has a large cylinder of the width of ordinary wall paper.

There are grooves around the sides and bottom of this cylinder, into which are fitted the rods on the ends of the rollers, and when in position, the faces of the rollers just touch the cylinder. An endless chain band comes to each of the rollers below, each band works in a color pan, which contains, in liquid form, the coloring matter to be carried on the roller to which the band belongs. Each roller is placed in such position that the part of the design upon it will strike exactly in the spot necessitated by the relative position of the other rollers.

When all is ready the paper that has passed through the blotting machine is placed between the cylinder and the first roller, the cylinder and the rollers revolve rapidly, and soon the paper is beautifully printed. At each of the endless color bands there is a steel scraper called a doctor, and it is the doctor's duty to prevent too much liquid from the color pans from getting on the rollers.

The wall paper press throws off ten rolls of paper a minute, and each roll contains sixteen yards. It is said that stamped paper for walls was first manufactured in Holland about the year 1555. Some of the very costly wall paper in use nowadays is beautifully embossed and hand-printed.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Ash street Methodist Episcopal church will give a dime supper at the residence of Mrs. William Windener Wednesday evening, January 17. Everybody is welcome.

William Donnelly, of Binghamton, N. Y., is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Miller, on South Pine street. St. Mary's Council, Young Men's Institute, held their regular monthly meeting last evening and succeeded in getting through with a large amount of business.

A Distinction and a Difference.

Dr. Temple, the archbishop of Canterbury, who has reached the age of 78, is a notable personality about whom many good stories are related, as usual on his days. Some years ago a young curate, seeking to be licensed, was bidden by Dr. Temple to read a few verses of the Bible, in order that his fitness for conducting public worship might be judged. "Not loud enough," was the criticism of the bishop when the young man had finished.

"Oh! I'm sorry to hear that, my lord," replied the curate; "a lady in the church yesterday told me I could be heard most plainly all over." "Ah! are you enviously," suddenly asked Dr. Temple. "Yes," my lord. The bishop smiled grimly and said: "Now, listen to me, young man. While you are engaged don't believe everything the lady tells you; but," he added, with a deep chuckle, "if you are married believe every word she says."
