Take a glass tumbler and fill it with urine; after it has stood 24 hours, if it has a sediment, if it is milky or cloudy, if it is pale or discolored, stringy or ropy, your Kidneys and Bladder are in a dangerous condition and need im-

"Last of the Rohans." Andrew Mack, Irish actor, singer of sweet songs and especial favorite of the feminine portion of the theater-going world, appeared last evening at This evening the Library society will the Lyceum in his latest romantic On January 30th a box social will be Irish drama, "The Last of the Rohans," and was tendered about as enheld in M. It will be hailed with delight by the young folks as it has thusiastic a reception by an audience that almost overflowed into the street as any actor in any clime could wish been a long time since one was held

The play was the usual type of drama A Mr. Burdick, of Nicholson, is movused by singing stars, but was, perhaps, a little more cleverly worked Mrs. Ferry Chamberlin visited out than the ordinary ones and was mounted with more than customary Mr. N. served encores for his really clever work. He had a number of new songs "Housework is hard work without Gold Dust" written by himself, all catchy, tuneful melodies. Notable among these was a love song with a softly flowing waltz refrain which took the house storm.

Mr. Mack was in good voice sang in his usual acceptable style. In this play he dispenses with the St. Bernard dog, so long considered a necessary adjunct of every Irish singing comedian, and uses a thoroughbre i horse as a companion instead. The horse's name is Tim and he's really a very capable actor.

The company supporting the star was a very good one. Miss Josephine Lovett as Mary Lee won the affections of the audience and George W. Deyo was especially excellent in the small Father Bernard. The little child, Shilla, was played in a clever manner by a wee little, winsome maid

Al. G. Field's Minstrels.

The opening overture of the Al. G. Field Greater minstrels is a pretty company in a very taking and effective manner. Before the curtain ascends drums are heard in the distance, giving the effect of the minstrels on parade. As the curtain is rolled up there is disclosed to the audience one of the prettiest stage settings ever designed. It is an exquisite representation of a

"In Old Kentucky."

Young authors may find plenty of encouragement in the brilliantly successful career of that intensely American play, "In Old Kentucky," which come to the Lyceum tomorrow evening. Fo six years it had filled the theaters to their capacity in every part of this broad land, and it bids fair to continue doing so indefinitely. It is beyond question the most notable instance of enduring popularity in an American play $50,000 TO LOAN ON CITY PROPERTY in amounts to suit borrower. W. Gay-lord Thomas, Attorney, Republican bidg. that the American stage has had. Manager Jacob Litt has retained the original company, all the clever little pickaninnies, "Queen Bess," the favorite black thoroughbred, and the other horses, and has provided new scenery throughout for this season's tour. As a play it is admitted to be the most vivid and truthful portrayal of Southern life we have had. It is full of splendid comedy and strong bits of character and with an abundance of contrast, plenty of incident, swiftness of movement and a string of novel features like the now famous Pickaninny band and the horse race. It is no wonder that it has met with such great success.

McCauley-Patton Company.

What the Wheeling W. Va., prens has to say of the McCauley-Patton company, which appears at the Acalemy of Music next week: "One of the best popular price entertainments ever given here was that of the McCauley-Patton company at the

Samuels last night. The company was large and capable and the play one that appealed to the heart. An audience that filled the house to overflowing followed the absorbing story of "The Minister's Son," and gave the tribute of applause, laughter and sorrow to the telling points. W. R. Patton played the title role admirably and recalled Sol Smith Russell by his quaintness and humor. He is an easy actor and won the audience from the first. Though cast for the insignificant part of Peggy Owen, Ida Florence showed herself to be an actress of ability who would shine in a heavier role. Mr. Stockdale made a good villain, if the expression may be used. Misses Russell and Pomeroy were seen to good advantage and the whole company was highly credit. able.
