UNION LABEL CITY NOTES

DEATH WAS NATURAL.—Coroner Roberts held an autopsy Saturday in the case of Mrs. S. L. Wallace, who died Friday night at her home, 25 Penn. avenue. Death was due to natural causes and an inquest was not necessary.

LIEDERKRANZ BALL.—The Scranton Liederkranz society will hold their thirtieth annual masquerade ball at their hall on Lackawanna avenue on Wednesday evening, January 24. There will be a full orchestra of twelve pieces which will furnish the music for the dancing.

ACCUSED OF ASSAULT.—A warrant was issued Saturday afternoon at the office of Alderman John T. Howe, at the instance of Anna McInnis, of Mineral street, who charges Michael Cosgrove with striking both herself and her husband, Henry McInnis. The hearing will be held today.

TO PURCHASE LOOMS.—The question of employing the prisoners at the county jail has at last been settled. At a meeting of the Lackawanna county prison board Saturday it was decided, upon recommendation of Commissioners Durkin and Morris, to purchase three Philadelphia looms for the weaving of rag carpet. The long time prisoners will be put at the work.

WILL DISCUSS MILK.—The household economics section of the Green Ridge Women's club will meet at the

Mrs. Patrick Costello, of 610 Prescott avenue, yesterday notified the police of the disappearance of her young son John, who left home Friday afternoon and has not been seen since.

The boy worked in the Sandy Banks mine, and drew his pay, amounting to about $18. He told the other boys that he was going to Baltimore.

cause may not triumph. We do not want for the Boers a kind of liberty that England would give them. We want the Boers to have the kind of liberty they want.

Bailey's Moral Support. Representative Bailey, of Texas, said that he came merely to give his moral support to the cause. His address was a vigorous one and he was loudly applauded.

I am sick of hearing about our brothers across the sea. England is brutal. She had taken the British home and she went in a brutal manner among the logs and fens of the island. It is not merely British greed of gold or desire for wealth that urges England on during the war. She finds an opportunity to blot a republic from the map of the world and she does not hesitate to do it. I blush to say there are men under this flag who hope to see this crime perpetrated. But they hope in vain.

Senator William V. Allen, of Nebraska, in a vigorous address, said: If there is any country on the face of the earth that owes the British empire nothing that country is the United States of America. England seeks to rule all other nations. There is not a more lofty motive about her policy. Wherever she can advantageously extend her commerce into that locality she carries her arms. Whether it be fertile fields of diamonds or gold the same greed for gain has actuated her conquests. I am not a believer in non-intervention when liberty is at stake. I intervene in every case with sympathy loudly and forcibly expressed, but I would intervene with every blade of grass with the next cablegram from across the water will bring news of Buller's defeat.

Clark's Oration. The next speaker was Representative Champ Clark, of Missouri, who said in part:

Wherever people are struggling for liberty they should have the friendship of all Americans. It passes understanding that there should be any argument as to that proposition within the broad confines of this pulsant republic. Two years ago this would not have been.

In the elder day we would have made the walking ring; now, governmentally speaking, we are dumb as oysters. Wherefore? Because England is a robber nation; we are ambitious to become a robber nation; and the world is made up of nations together for self-protection, and because it is so English, don't you know.

That's governmental America. Mark you, only official America.

From its sordid and inhuman verdict we appeal to the unfeeling masses, who make and unmake nations, when Abraham Lincoln affectionately denominated "the plain people."

The senate of the United States may laugh to scorn Senator Allison's resolution of sympathy with the Boers; but the tolling millions of America will send their sympathy and their hearty God-speed across the sea to the brave burghers, who are the true workmen seen on earth since Andrew Jackson's immortal day at New Orleans.

Why should we not sympathize with these sturdy defenders of their liberty and their homes? They are in the right. Not only that, they have five times as much cause for fighting as our fathers had in 1776. The presidents all favor such action. We passed resolutions of sympathy with the Greeks, struggling against the Turks, and in advocacy of those resolutions, Daniel Webster established his fame as an orator by his lofty impassioned appeal to the moral sentiments of the people. He read the lead of Henry Clay we hastened to express our sympathy with the honest old American republicans. We did these things when we were a feeble folk.

Now, that we are so strong that we cannot estimate our strength, we have fallen to the law estate of being John Bull's ally in butchering and despoiling white men fighting valiantly for their altars and their fires. It's the Boer's gold and diamonds that the English are fighting for and not for the rights of the Uitlanders.

The "and Others." A number of others spoke on the same general line as their predecessors. A series of resolutions were adopted extending sympathy and encouragement to the Boers, declaring that Great Britain is resorting to unprovoked and barbarous war tactics in the arming and mobilization of savages, the distribution of dum dum bullets to her soldiers, and the illegal seizure of peaceful merchandise on route from the United States to friendly Portuguese markets, directing the attention of the president of the United States to these unlawful proceedings, urging the president to exercise the prerogative vested in him by the recent peace convention at The Hague and begging him to "offer his good offices as a mediator between the Boers and the British for the deliverance of these unfortunate Englishmen and their families, now being punished, vicariously for the crime of a brigand cabal of gold grabbers and land hungry conspirators, not one of whom is at the forefront of the battle."

Repatriate. He—I don't see what you want with a self-righteousness that's not a golfer. She—But you can't doubt, tell me why you wear a box coat and never call me a boxer.—Detroit Free Press.

THE GREATEST PROBLEM OF THE AGE

SERMON BY REV. A. H. SMITH AT GREEN RIDGE CHURCH.

He Said That the Greatest Problem of All Time Has Been the Individual Problem—The Necessity of Conquering Self Dwell Upon—Idea Entertained by Society That They Are the Victims Instead of the Villains of Present Social System.

Rev. Albert H. Smith, of Berwick, the well-known evangelist, yesterday commenced a series of evangelistic meetings in the Green Ridge Baptist church on Monday evening. Rev. Smith is a fluent speaker, possessed of an especially resonant voice which he uses to splendid advantage. Last evening he spoke on "The Greatest Problem of the Age," and took his text from Psalms 40:17: "But I am poor and needy; yet the Lord thinketh upon me; thou art my help and my deliverer; make no tarrying, O my God." He spoke in part as follows:

"Every man born to the world represents a certain thought of God. The greatest problem of life always is the individual problem. No man can expect to be promoted to a position unless he is especially fitted for it. The 'me problem' has been the problem of the centuries gone by and will be of those to come.

"But the right men in the right place and there can be no limit put on human achievement. General Grant will be known to history as the greatest military genius this country ever produced. He conquered the people of the United States at Fort Donelson; he conquered the army of Vicksburg; he conquered congress at Lookout Mountain, and later he conquered the South; but first of all he conquered Ulysses S. Grant.

"All the happiness you or I can ever have is measured by the capacity to receive happiness which we ourselves develop. God cannot put a gallon into a pint cup and if you allow yourself to be a pint cup, figuratively speaking, you will never have a gallon of happiness.

SIGNIFICANCE OF LIFE. "The awful significance of life is that these few short years determine what we shall be at where we shall be through all eternity. A hymn, written and inspired by a pure motive, but whose title has a very mistaken sentiment, is, 'Oh, to Be Nothing,' as though there is any virtue in being nothing.

"Christ made Himself of no reputation, but He did not make Himself of no character. He offered Himself freely for the sins of the whole world. Evil is more heinous of life than is good. A surgeon once remarked to his son, 'Tom, I can give you the best of my descendants, but not the gift of grace.' "The great battles of life must be fought alone. We come into life alone; its most important decisions are made alone and we go out of it alone.

"A husbandly man of Chicago once sent his wife and three children to Scotland for the summer months. A few days later he received word that the ship they had sailed in had foundered in mid-ocean. A few days more passed and he received a cablegram from his wife saying: 'I was saved alone.' He went into his study and after meditating for a few moments wrote these lines:

When peace like a river attendeth my soul, When sorrow like sea-bills follows, When that which I most love has taught me to sail, It is well, it is well, with my soul.

"God judges man individually. There is a prevalent and growing tendency in this age of ours to escape responsibility for our acts. A certain Christian judge once handed down an unjust verdict in a case. He was asked by his friends, how he, a Christian, could render such an opinion. He said: 'I gave that decision not as a Christian but as a judge.' This is a good example of the unthinking character of the age. The idea entertained by the riff-raff of society today is that they are the victims rather than the villains of our present social system.

In conclusion let us remember that despite the inconceivable immensity of the universe and the tiny specks that we are in it, that we each have a place in the thought of God."

RELIGIOUS NEWS NOTES. Rev. Frank Milman occupied the pulpit of the Providence Presbyterian church yesterday morning. Evangelistic services were held in the Penn Avenue Baptist church last evening after the regular service.

Rev. C. M. Galt delivered a forceful sermon at the Elm Park church last evening on "A Man and a Sheep."

Rev. Madison, the evangelist, occupied the pulpit of the Central Avenue Methodist Episcopal church last evening.

Rev. S. F. Matthews, of the First Baptist church, occupied the pulpit yesterday after an absence owing to illness.

Henry Curry addressed the Gospel meeting in the National Young Men's Christian association yesterday afternoon.

Rev. Thomas de Gruchy, D. D., of the Jackson Street Baptist church, will read a paper on "Ethical Education" at the Baptist ministers' meeting this morning.

Rev. A. L. Hamer, of St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran church, spoke yesterday morning on "The Strength and Glory of a Living Spirit," and in the evening on "The Cloud of Witnesses."

A popular praise and evangelistic service was held in the Providence Presbyterian church yesterday. Special music was rendered and Dr. Guild spoke on "Some Facts About Man."

At Grace Evangelical Lutheran church yesterday, the pastor, Rev. Luther Hess, preached on his morning topic "Christ and Woman," and in the evening spoke on "The Devil's Prayer."

The sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered in the Second Presbyterian church yesterday morning and the evening service Dr. Robinson spoke on "Making Straight Paths for Christ."

Dr. John P. Moffat, of the Washburn Street Presbyterian church, occupied the pulpit of the Summer Avenue church at a o'clock last evening in the absence of the pastor, Rev. L. W. Foster, who is ill. Revival services are being held in the Simpson, Hampton Street and Cedar Avenue Methodist Episcopal churches. The attendance has been unusually large.

A Happy Mother's Gratitude

LETTER TO HER PINKHAM NO. 26, 1895.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have many, many thanks to give you for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. After first confinement, I was sick for nine years with prolapsus of the womb, a great deal of headache, palpitation of heart, and leucorrhoea. I felt so weak and tired that I could not do my work. I became pregnant again and took your Compound all through, and now have a sweet baby girl. I never before had such an easy time during labor, and I feel it was due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now able to do my work and feel better than I have for years. I cannot thank you enough."—Mrs. Ed. ELLINGER, DEVINE, TEX.

Wonderfully Strengthened. "I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills and feel wonderfully strengthened. Before using your remedies I was in a terrible state; felt like fainting every little while. I thought I must surely die. But now, thanks to your remedies, those feelings are all gone."—Mrs. EMILIE SCHNEIDER, 1244 HELEN AVE., DETROIT, MICH.

and much interest is manifested by those who attend.

All the morning session of the Provisional Methodist Episcopal conference at Berwick, the pastor, Rev. William Edgar, spoke on "A Two-Sided View of a Misunderstood Subject," which proved to be very interesting and instructive.

Secretary Berry, of the Railroad Young Men's Christian association, assisted by the "Lodge Fellows" band, conducted evangelistic services at the Ash Street Methodist Episcopal church last evening. The services will be continued every evening this week.

NEW TRUNK LINE. Will Link the Great Lakes with the Chesapeake.

Pittsburg, Jan. 21.—The Dispatch tomorrow will say: A new trunk line from Erie to Johnston, and linking the great lakes to the Chesapeake by a new route is one of the important projects outlined for development in Pennsylvania this year. The new line will become one of the standard grain and ore routes. Should New York capitalists execute plans they have been working on for years (good authority says they are practically completed), a branch will reach Pittsburg and a new outlet to the Chesapeake and Atlantic seaboard will be given this city.

John B. McDonald, contractor, who recently received the $25,000,000 contract for constructing the great traction line in New York, said to be one of the principal projects of the route.

The route of the new line will be from Erie to Cambridgeport, to Titusville, to Tionesta, to Cooksburg, (Clarion county, by bridging the Allegheny, thence to Brookville, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Blaineville and Johnston. Included in the scheme is a proposed line from Black Lick station near Blairsville to Pittsburg, entering the city by way of the Pittsburg and Western, the Pittsburg Junction road and the Baltimore and Ohio.

The line from Erie to Johnston will be 210 miles long and will develop one of the largest coal fields in western Pennsylvania. In Cambria county alone 120,000 acres have been leased to the Erie and Johnston. The Erie Iron company will spend several millions of dollars in improvements and extensions.

It is said this company has already made a contract with New York capitalists to deliver 2,000,000 tons of ore annually for twenty years. Another development of the scheme in the near future is a giant steel plant at Erie to cost $5,000,000.

George Backus, proprietor of the billiard room and cafe which bears his name, gives a curious version of the origin of billiards. He says that the subject are extraordinary and that he has aired his knowledge to a party of well known gentlemen several of the latter refused to receive the information seriously. Mr. Backus cited the fondness of the English people for the game and said it was not strange that a letter giving the origin of the sport should have been found in the British Museum.

"The game was invented," said Mr. Backus, "by a London pawnbroker whose name was William Kew. Kew not only loaned money, but he sold cloth, and for the latter purpose had a yard measure with which he computed accounts. One day to amuse himself, Kew took the three round balls which were the emblems of his trade—they may still be seen above the doorways of certain Scranton establishments—and placing them on the counter began to poke them about with the yard measure. He found it fascinating pastime and acquired a kind of skill in making one ball glance off the other. His friends, who saw him thus engaged called the game 'Billiards.' It was soon shortened to 'billiards.'"

"But the yard stick was the instrument with which the balls were knocked about and the difficulty arose in finding a man for the improvement. Finally they called it after the name of the pawnbroker—a Kew."

All of which proves that Mr. Backus may be included among those who dream out good stories.

Dr. John W. Busch, the new house surgeon at the Lackawanna hospital, is a native of Philadelphia, and a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Medical school, which he left last year with the class of '98.

The doctor is a tall, well built young man, and while at college was considerable of an athlete, being especially distinguished in the boating line.

He rowed on the "Varsity" crews of '98 and '99, being stationed, No. 6 oar, and as will be remembered both of these crews proved the victors in all the big contests in which they rowed.

By being a member of the crew the doctor earned the privilege of wearing the "Varsity" letter P. on his breast, and has in his possession now a heavy red and blue sweater with a big P. worked on it.

Dr. Busch is a pleasant, genial person, and has already made many friends in the city, all of whom wish him a successful career at the hospital.

BRIEF MENTION OF MEN OF THE HOUR

WORK DONE BY WEATHER OBSERVER H. E. PAINE.

For Twenty Years He Has Been Keeping Tabs on the Weather and for Five Years Has Been Rendering Valuable Service to the Government—George Backus Tells a Story About the Origin of Billiards—Dr. John W. Busch, New House Surgeon at Lackawanna.

A man who works for a wealthy master, in a position requiring extended daily toil, without as much pay as "thank you" and for the public good alone, is an exception in these days of the dollar, it will be agreed, it is difficult to conceive of such a person, yet Scranton numbers one among its other possessions that are unusually extraordinary. He is H. E. Paine, the local weather observer.

Twenty years ago Mr. Paine began keeping tabs on the weather for his own gratification. He made a daily record of the thermometer, the direction of the wind and character of the day as to its clearness, cloudiness, and also as to whether or not it rained, snowed, hailed, sleeted or what. Some five years ago the United States weather bureau heard of this and enlisted him in its corps of local volunteer observers.

All the remuneration he sought was a supply of the paraphernalia with which to make exact observations and this he got. The paraphernalia consists of three thermometers, a barometer and a rain gauge. The thermometers are located in a small box with covered top and latticed sides built on a four foot pedestal in the rear of his home on Madison street. Automatic registers are attached to two of the thermometers, which show at a glance the warmest and coldest point reached during the day. The third, a spirit thermometer, is free from all attachments, and is used to settle possible disputes between the other two.

The rain gauge is located nearby. It is a tin cylinder twenty inches in circumference and of about two feet depth, with an edge sufficiently sharp to split a rain drop or snow flakes. To the bottom of the cylinder is attached a smaller cylinder, more properly a tube, an inch and a half in diameter. The water is caught in the larger cylinder and runs into the smaller. If there has been any precipitation during the day it is readily measured with a yard stick, the proportion between the larger cylinder and the tube having been accurately established. At 7 o'clock every evening Mr. Paine makes his observations of temperature and precipitation.

Having done this he sets the thermometer registers back to the point indicated then on the thermometer, empties the rain gauge and covers them for another twenty-four hours. A brief daily report is forwarded to the department by telegraph and each month a lengthy and detailed statement is sent by mail on blanks furnished for that purpose. A carbon copy of these monthly reports is kept for his own use and is also sent to the occasional weather articles appearing in The Tribune are compiled. Mr. Paine, as may be believed, takes an ardent interest in the work and is always ready to wade through his volumes of statistics to find something that a newspaper man may think will be of interest to the public.

George Backus, proprietor of the billiard room and cafe which bears his name, gives a curious version of the origin of billiards. He says that the subject are extraordinary and that he has aired his knowledge to a party of well known gentlemen several of the latter refused to receive the information seriously.
