are much improved. DIVING FOR SPONGES.

Occupation That Is Beset with Many and Grave Perils.

From the New York Sun Dreadful stories are told of divers' encounters with sharks. Of Bengasi # diver named Skoumbourdi signaled danger after having been down only a noment. He was instantly pulled in and the men at the ropes found him grown strangely heavy. As he neared the surface the watchers saw him in the grasp of a big shark, which had hold of his waist. As he reached the surface and men on the boat attempted to rescue him the shark turned on its side, gave a tremendous pull, cutting him in half, and disappeared.

Certain parts of Rhodes are fascinating because known to hold fortunes in sponger. One coral tree in Rhodes alone has cost ten lives. Ordinarily sponge divers do not trouble about coral, but this tree was known to be especially valuable, and the sponge divers have tried in vain to secure it. Of nine no trace was ever found. But of the tenth the shark who guards it allowed the head and chest to get away from him and it was pulled to the sur-

Off Bengasi John Catavis, a plain fisher, started on a dive holding the marble slab in his hands. When about fifteen fathoms down, as the rop- floated loosely the men at the rope began to haul back. It stuck and hauled tight for a second, then became loose again, and Cataris was pulled to the surface with his flesh hanging in shreds, as if lacerated by rows of sharp knives. Cataris declared that as he dived head first he suddenly passed into a dark hot place, then was hurled backward, followed by the marble. He had dived head first into the open mouth of a shark, and the fishers maintain that the marble struck the shark's stomach with such force tat it caused him pain and he expelled the whole load. Cataris is still diver and has been fishing again this season off the same Bengasi; but he wears now on his breast a tiny crucifix and a likeness of St. Nicholas, to whose protection he commits himself before each dive. Indeed, in all the kaiques there is an image or picture of the patron saint of Greek fishers, St.

Next to the sharks the divers dread the octopus and his deadly grasp, Innumerable stories are told of encounters with them. Themeli has a brotherin-law, Michael Tsangalis of Kalymos, who once was the foremost diver of them all. Only two seasons ago off Crete he had been diving, and when he came up the anchor was tangled. couldn't find it, and a second was sent. Wher, this man did not come up, a thir ! up, and realizing then from the signals what the trouble probably was, six divers with knives went down to their aid. The two were held fast by one octopus. Warned by the expectation of the fate of their comrades and guided by the position of the ropes, the six to cut off the tentacles by which they were held and bring the two men to the surface. One had been held by the tentacles in such a fashion that he died from strangulation, but the other re-

Nicholas.

Besides shacks and devil fish, there are still other enemies among the things that swim the sea and call it home. There are swordfish that have been known to do royal battle with a diver, and vat! or 'sunfish' with a spiked taii, quite as formidable and only a trifle less in size than the weapon of a swordfish. In fact, every fish that has been provided with weapons for its defense turns them in attack upon the plain diver.

Even the sponge itself is the home of deadly enemy. Often in the sponges there is a curious worm. The instant the sponge is placed in the net bag which rests on the diver's chest this worm fastens itself upon the diver's body. It bores and swells, and its attack is described by Themelis, who carries a scar from it like a sword thrust. After receiving this thrust the plain diver waits for nothing, but rapidly reaches the kaique, and his first action is to cut out with a sharp razor. kept always for that purpose, as much of the wound as posible. Then another man with a mouth full of oil applies his lips to the wound and extracts as much as possible of the poison. This poison is so deadly that the longest a man has been known to linger before dying was ten hours. For years this worm carried off a startling number of divers. Then a victim was taken to the doctor of a French man-of-war which was in the neighborhood, The doctor had been interested in the worm's poison, and, after obtaining some of the virus from the wound and analyzing it, he was able to supply to the sponge fishers an ointment or salve which has since saved as many lives from the worm's bite as had been lost before.

Convention Hesitated. "First. The Constitutional convention hesitated between conferring the power of appointing senators upon the executive and the legislature of the state in the beginning. Like the legislature, the executive of the state was supposed to represent the will of the people. Under the Constitutional ar-Carrington, who have been seriously ill, rangements then existing, he appointed all Litte officers and appointed judges, who held their office for life. So there is no reason to suppose that they considered any executive an unfit Instrument for such appointment. And they settled the question by giving the power of permanent appoint-ment to the legislature, and of tenporary appointment to the executive

"Second. We can conceive no reason likely to have influenced the framers of the Constitution for making a distinction between cases of vacancy occurring in one way or at one time and vacancies occurring in any other way or at any other time. The office of senator may be at any time of infinite importance to the interests of the state. Upon a single vote may often depend and sometimes has depended the fate of measures which would bring prosperity or misery into every workshop and also every family in Pennsylvania. We do not believe that when the Constitution was enacted it would have occurred to anybody that if a senator died within a week of the adjournment of the legislature, or at any time when there were three parties in the legislature who could not agree, or at any time when the two houses who formerly made an election by concurrent vote were of ways of thinking in politics so different that they could not be recon-ciled, that the state must remain unrepresented until a new legislature should be chosen.

"They meant, as we believe, that for the interest of the state and the interest of the whole country the senate should always be full, so far as they could devise a Constitutional mechanism to accomplish that purpose." They say further that "the language of the very clause in question cannot be construed as the opponents of Mr. Quay would construe it, or in any other way than the undersigned construe it, without destroying its own purpose. If there be no power in executive of Pennsylvania to appoint a successor to Mr. Quay under this clause of the Constitution, there is no power in the legislature to choose such successor until the end of the term; and in every case where a senator dies or resigns, or where, after such death or resignation, the legislature has met and adjourned without a choice, or whatever, at the beginning of a term, the vacancy remains unfilled, it must remain untilled until the end of the six years, according to the logic of the majority of the committee.

The State Not in Fault.

On another point the minority say: "It is said that if the legislature has been 'in session after a vacancy and has failed to fill it the state is in fault; One man was sent to disentangle it. He that the legislature has neglected its duty, and so it is not unjust that the state should suffer. There are two was started down. He also did not come answers to this argument. First, that it is for the interest of the whole peo ple that every state should be fully represented; and second, that there is no fault to be imputed to the legislature of a state or to the people, where a majority vote is required, if there be a failure to elect. discovered their plight and managed claim that the case of a failure to eleca president for want of a Constitutional majority, a case provided for by conferring a power upon the house of representatives voting by states, is the case of fault or negligence on the part of the people?" The minorty then give considerable attention to the various cases and conclude as follows:

"The case of Allen, Washington, was decided with the Lee Mantle case and without argument a decision to which Mr. Beckwith, of Wyoming, submitted without further contest. At that time there was an earnest division in the senate on an important question relating to the currency, which created for the time being more earnest differences of opinion than those existing between the two great political parties on other questions. a time not favorable to a dispassionate, non-partisan judgment. "We prefer the authority of the New Hampshire cases, which was acted on also in the case of Mr. Pasco, of Florida, and we think that a decision which must inevitably deprive states in the Union for long periods of time of their rightful representation under the Constitution will not be permitted long to stand, and that no settlement in the question of derogation of the rights of the states, and, as we conceive, in violation of the intent of the framers of the Constitution should be acquiesced in.

THE MARKETS.

Wall Street Review.

Wall Street Review.

New York, Jan. 23.—The stock market was as barren of any well defined issues bearing on prices of securities as for several days past. Nevertheless, there was a general and a quite pronounced collapse from the firmness which has been characteristic of the undertone of the market for several days past. The reaction took its initiative from the European bourses. The foreign selling here was in very considerable volume and was accompanied by rumors of new disasters to the British military forces in South Africa. The denial of these reports failed to check the reactionary tendency. The decline caused the taking of profits by speculators who have held through several days of rising prices and were weary of waiting for further advance. The hait in the advancing tendency also encouraged the putting out of short lines by the professional bears. Even allowing for all of these professional movements, the volume of the dealings on the decline was of rather impressive propertiess and the lesses senteline. lines by the professional bears. Even allowing for all of these professional movements, the volume of the dealings on the decline was of rather impressive proportions and the losses sustained, especially by the leading international stocks, are quite severe. Only a few of them escaped with less than one point of loss and in others it extends to near two points. In some of the prominent speculative specialites losses are even greater. Sugar, Brooklyn Transit, Tobacco, United States Leather, People's Gas and some of the iron and steel stocks were notable sufferers. Consolidated Gas, Metropolitan Street Railway, Third Avenue and Manhattan all showed early strength, but all yielded to the latter weakness gains being entirely wiped out. There came a hait to the decline early in the afternoon with a demand from the shorts to cover but the welling was renewed before the close which was weak at the lowest of the day. The beard room traders expect to get their stocks back in London in the morning at a profit. There was no quotable change in money rates today but the tone of the market was a trific firmer and sterling exchange also raillied a fraction. The addition to the New York banks' reserves were believed to Ashew some falling off from the recent large rate of increase. Total sales 392,700.

Prices in the bond market started upward in the morning but reacted quite sharply in sympathy with stocks during the afternoon bonds which resisted the decline being the exception. This development was attributed to the lessened accumulation of unemployed fund. Total sales par value, $2,000,000. U. S. old is registered declined $1, and do, coupons, the 3s and new 4s $1 in the bid price.

A FACELESS CLOCK. The Curious Old Timepiece of a Chicago Man.

Probably the most novel clock in Chicago is one now in possession of C. E. Moore, master mechanic of the Chicago City Railway company. It the other. A small brass pointer is so curious, in fact, that the ob- moves up and down past these hour server is tempted to say it is not a clock at all, but a mechanical hour glass. However, it contains something resembling clock mechanism, and was once used for telling time, so that its claims to being called a clock can hardly be disputed. But It is certainly an unusual timepiece. Mr. Moore is something of a collector of curiosities, and is an inventor and mechanical genius in his own right. His home is filled with old, odd and unusual objects, from a twonanded Toledo blade used by the buycaneers to repel boarders in 1400 to a perpetual motion machine. But his atest pet and joy among his many interesting bric-a-bracs is the clock says the Chicago Inter-Ocean. The clock is unquestionably of Chi-

BEAUTY, THE CONQUEROR BELLAVITA

Sold by McGarrah & Thomas, Drug-nese or Japanese workmanship, though a Chinese friend of Mr. Moore says such clocks are as rare in China or Japan as in this country. Mr. Moore found it in a junk shop on South Clark street, so far gone into decay that its original form and mission could scarcely be told. He bought it for a few cents, took it home and devoted his leisure moments for three weeks restoring it. The result of his labor and mechanical skill are evident in the finished and almost new look of the clock at present. The clock is made of mahogany, principally, and is not over fifteen inches long and two and one-half inches square. At the top there is a little glass case four inches long. where one would ordinarily expect the face to be. There is no face there, however, or at least no time-telling tace. Instead there is a representation in brass of a jar full of flowers, which supports and conceals the works behind. The face, if one could call it such, extends all down the front, the hour marks being placed one below marks. The pointer is attached to a lead weight, and then raised to the top of the marks, and then gradually drops to the bottom, meving past a mark each hour. The weight thus

CATARRH FOR TWENTY YEARS AND CURED IN A FEW DAYS.-Nothing too simple, nothing too hard for Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder to give relief in an instant. Hon. George James, of Scranton, Pa., says: "I have been a martyr for Catarrh for 29 years, constant hawking, dropping in the throat and pain in the head, very offensive breath. I tried Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. The first application gave instant relief. After using a few bottles all these symptoms of Catarrh left me." For sale by Mat-thews Bros. and W. T. Clark.—2.
