OBITUARY

The death of Charles Wilcox Pond at his home on Surset avenue, North Park, which occurred early yesterday morning. will carry sorrow to many hearts. Mr. Pond came home from Princeton univer-sity at the Christmas holidays in apparently perfect hearth, and with the glad-ness which had been carned by hard and faithful devotion to his college work and faithful devotion to his college work through the first term of his sophomore year, began to enjoy, with his large circle of home friends, the social pleasures of the vacation. Too soon was he taken with the dread typhoid fever and for the last month has been struggli g bravely against the fatal disease with the vigor of a pure and strong young manhood. All that the fondest love and most unremitation. that the fondest love and most unremit ting care could do has been done by day and night for his relief and recovery, but the Railroad Young Men's Christian scarlet fever than of diph association to his parents, Charlet H. and Mrs. Harriet I. the most promising young men of his years. Mr. Pond prepared for college at the School of the Lackawanna, and at Lawrenceville, N. J., and entered at Princeton a year ago last September, with an excellent record, a high ambition and fine prospects of distinction as a student. In manners and spirit he had the charm which rendered him popular with his associates and endeared him beyond expression to the inner circle of his friends. It is hard to comprehend why so elevated and promising a life should thus early be removed from this world. It could only be that it might meet the wishes of infinite Wisdom in another and better state of existence. His functal will be held at the Green Ridge Presbyterian church tomorrow afternoon at 3
