The many friends of Thomas Rogan were shocked to learn of his death in so horrible a manner at Pittston on Saturday last. He was a son of Mich-ael Rogan, of Scott street. Besides parents he is survived by two brothers, Anthony Regan, of Mayfield, and John Rogan of Scranton, and four sisters, Lizzie, Mamie, Sadie and Katie Rogan. The family has the sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement. The remains were taken to his home yesterday afternoon by Undertaker Timlin, of Taylor. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning 10 o'clock. Interment will be made in St. Patrick's cemetery.

A souvenir social and supper will be held in the Presbyterian church on Thursday evening. The supper will consist of all the delicacies of the season and will be served during the evening. There will also be a fish pond in charge of M. K. Hamdin, which will be one of the features of the evening. Admission, 25 cents.

"Marie Antoinette."

Modjeska appeared at the Lyceum last night in a drama dealing with the life of that unfortunate queen of France, "Marie Antoinette." The play was fashioned by Charles Stuart, who built it around the sad and dramatic events that entered into the life of the queen during the period of the revolu-tion, when the streets of Paris were drenched with blood and death was everywhere. Modjeska loves a play with a sombre background, tears and tugging at heart strings and all of these "Marie Antoinette" can furnish. It is a drama that gives the charming actress great scope for her wonderful powers. It opens at Little Trianon, where Louis and his queen were wont to shake off the fetters of royalty and there she proved that in comedy and tragedy she is equally happy. At Tri-anon she first heard the rumbles of the coming revolution. It was following the rehearsal of a comedy that was to be given at Trianon for the diversion of the queen and her household. In this act Modjeska's comedy was truly charming. Toward the close of the act, as it became evident that shadows were beginning to gather

The olio was opened by excellent character impersonations by Kline and Gotthold: the Rackett brothers, musical acrobats, followed with their original act and were well received. Mazuz and Mazett, comedy acrobats, are probably without peers in their line. and they came in for a good share of the applause. Jennie Eddy and her Russian Midgets gave an entertaining number in the black face class, and Bennett and Rice were well received.

The Burke brothers and their trained donkey, "Wise Mike," were funnier than ever and kept the house in continucus laughter upon every appearnnce. The company is one of the most meritorious that has been at the Galety this season. They will appear today and tomorrow afternoon and evening.
