IN THE OCEAN'S DEPTHS.

Something About the Temperature

The temperature at the bottom of the cean is nearly down to freezing point, and sometimes actually below it. There is a total absence of light as far as sunlight is concerned, and there is an enormous pressure, reckoned at about a ton to the square inch in every thousand fathoms, which is 160 times greater than that of the atmosphere we live in. At 2,500 fathoms the pressure is 30 times more powerful than the stram pressure of a locomotive when drawing a train. As late as 1880 a leading zoologist explained the existence of deep-sea animals at such depths by assuming that their bodies were composed of solids and liquids of great density, and contained no air. This however, is not the case with deep-sea fish, which are provided with air-in flated swimming bladders. If one of these fish, in full chase after its prey happens to ascend beyond a certai level, its bladder becomes distended with the decreased pressure, and carries it in spite of its efforts, still higher in its course; in fact, members of this unfortunate class are fable to be-
