PIREMEN HAVE RETURNED. The Franklin Engine company's committee who visited Lebanon returned yesterday morning and are enthusiastic at the treatment they received from the firemen of that historic town. Everywhere they went suppers were served and amusement was furnished, and the citizens in general welcomed them as their guests. In addition to the reception accorded the boys on Monday evening by the Union Steam Fire Engine company, whom they presented with resolutions and souvenirs, the Hook and Ladder company held a special meeting Tuesday evening for the purpose of receiving the distinguished guests. The Lebanon Daily Times speaks of it as follows: "The visiting Scranton firemen, consisting of John L. Lowry, John B. Coslett and Richard Davis, were royally entertained by the Lebanon Hook and Ladder company at a special meeting, which was largely attended, in the parlors of the company's house, last evening. It would have been imprudent, it was a great success and highly enjoyable. The programme of the evening was made up of speeches, instrumental and..."

Have You Seen Them? They're Really Handsome And So Rich Looking

Oriental and India Lounging Robes were once a luxury of the few wealthy people to whom money was no object. People of moderate means could see them and admire them, but to own one was out of the question, for the price was prohibitory. But

An Indian Lounging Robe, While Still a Luxury, Is Now Easily Within Your Reach.

Look at our windows any day you happen to pass the store this week, and take in the beauty of that display. The robes there shown have lost none of their subtle charms. The rich color harmonies in striking contrasts or soft shadings remain unchanged while the exquisite work of the genuine Indian weave is there in its entirety, for these are genuine.

Yet There Is a Change In These Lounging Robes. It's All in the Price, Though.

Fine Wove Robes, silk tape finish, magnificent assortment to select from, therefore lots of opportunities to display your good taste and judgment. And the prices—well, if we quoted figures you would imagine they could not be right, for that would create a false impression, for they're really O. K.

LIFE OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN. The popularity of Rev. P. J. Dr. Kain spoke in his usual instructive and humorous manner, beautifully describing the difficulties which Lincoln encountered in his struggle for education, the kind and benevolent disposition which he manifested toward all with whom he came in contact and how he captured his hearers in his speech at Cooper Institute, New York.

FIGURING ON THE COST. School Board Committees Preparing Their Estimates. Meetings of the teachers and high and training school committees were held last night, in the board of control rooms, for the purpose of preparing estimates for the coming fiscal year, as requested by the finance committee. The teachers committee fixed $168,000 as the least possible amount it could get along with. This is an increase of $11,000 over the amount allowed last year. The increase is asked that provision be made for fifteen new teachers. The committee believes that all this number of teachers will not be engaged, but as it is possible the increase in attendance may demand it the committee wants to be prepared for such an emergency.

OBITUARY. A very large circle of friends was made yesterday afternoon by the news of the death of Mrs. J. W. Garney. Mrs. Garney had been in ill health for some time past and it was only after prolonged illness and suffering that the end came. crease over last year's allowance as an additional pupil at the high school will demand that the force of teachers be increased by at least five. Incidentally, the committee voted in favor of granting the petition of the graduating class to have the commencement exercises in the Lyceum. The class this year numbers one hundred and five, and the stage in the high school auditorium will not accommodate them, while the auditorium itself is far too small to admit of them inviting more than two of their friends. President Jayne says that he confidently expects the levy will be cut down from fourteen to twelve mills, this year. He counts on making a big cut in the matter of supplies, repairs and text books, and says that if any new buildings are put up, which is not likely, they will be paid for in bonds.

TO REACH STROUDSBURG. Lehigh Valley Is Said to Have Plans for Getting a Road to That Place and Water Gap.

The Lehigh Valley, it is said, in railroad circles, will soon push its line into Stroudsburg and the Delaware Water Gap. Two routes are being considered: one direct from Mauch Chunk, a distance of about eighteen miles; the other from Easton, out over the Easton and Northern and the Bangor and Portland railways. These lines are tributaries of the Lehigh and run through a region rich with slate. The latter route is about 23 miles long, running from Slatinton to Portland; the former is ten miles, running from Easton to Nazareth. The Bangor and Portland is only a few miles south of Stroudsburg, and it's from some point on this road that the route to Stroudsburg and the Water Gap is being considered. Railroad men seem to think that this route will be chosen. It is shorter than the Mauch Chunk route, and it would bring Stroudsburg and the Water Gap nearer to the trunk line of the Lehigh Valley, the distance from Stroudsburg to Easton via the Bangor and Portland and Eastern and Northern route would be about twenty-five miles; from Stroudsburg to Philadelphia, about eighty-eight miles, and from Stroudsburg to New York about ninety-five miles.
