The dwelling house occupied by Mrs. Grace Carter and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Williams, on Second street, took fire under the roof about 7.30 o'clock Sunday evening, the conflagration being caused by a defective flue. Fortunately, it was discovered before it had attained much headway, and was quenched by a few pails of water. The alarm was sounded wihle services were being held in the churches, and caused quite a commotion for a time. A number of Willie Lewis' friends on Saturday night tendered him a surthe home of his sister, Mrs. Samuel Merritt, of Poplar street, Mayfield. The evening was pleasantly spent. John Lewis, of Richmondale, furnished the music with his phonograph. A fea-care, and at the end of the second act the spectacle of an orphan asylum in flames was carried on with a great deal of realism. N. S. Wood was cast for the part of Pery Atwood. The role was a juvenile one and did not give Mr. Wood full scope for his powers, but he, never-theless made a good sized hit with the audience. H. W. Fenwick as Floyd Giadbrook, the polished villain, and Walvin Woods as Hiram Maywood, the unvarnished blackguard, enacted the parts well, Mr. Fenwick coming in for a goodly share of hisses from the more emotional of the audience.
