Situated on the northern slope of the Wilkes-Barre mountain, on the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, is Mountain Park. It would be impossible to find a more attractive prospect for injoyment in the Wyoming valley, That part of the Central Railroad on which the park is situated, has a grade of one hundred feet to the mile, which makes the scone one of novelty and beauty. It would be difficult to find a more charming and attractive place for omfort and pleasure.

There was no light in the engine room, the lanters having been overturned.

When they entered the engine room Luddon asked "Who's there?" and 'nief Rafferty responded, "it's Pat Rufferty." The thought of the misdeeds he had committed during the day, coupled with the appearance the officers suggested to his mind, as Mr. Daniels alleged, the punishment that awaited him, and growing desperate and reckless he fired, killing Rafferty and wounding McKenna. Rafforty dropped at the first shot, and Me-

Konna at the third shot recled and fell, seriously wounded, striking against the machinery as he fell.

In examining one of the jurors, Me Murphy asked him if he was a firm beiever in the law of self-defense. This is the only suggestion, so far given, as to the line that will be pursued by Luddon's attorneys.
