ALDERMAN JONES' SISTER DIES.

Alderman S. S. Jones has received the sad intelligence of the death of his oldest sister, Mrs. James H. Fine. of Plymouth, which occurred last evening at 8.20 o'clock. She was born in Wilkes-Barre sixty-six years ago. Four sisters also survive her. They Mrs, E. Thomas, of Conklin, N. Y.: Mrs. William Scott and Mrs. M. A. Davis, of Binghamton, N. Y., and Mrs. T. H. Evans, of Fairview, Kansas This is the first death in the family in twenty-five years.

STEALING POWDER.

The theft of powder has caused the miners of Highland Park colliery-the "Last Chance"-considerable annoyance for some time past. Finally Andrew Kalfoot was caught in the act of walking off with a keg of explosive which belonged to Michael Sisco. He was taken before Alderman Jones last night, when John Janinsky testified to having witnessed the theft. The defendant was committed to the county

AFTER A PAPER MILL.

A number of prominent business men have expressed hope of soon lo-cating a paper mill in this city. For obvious reasons the name of the concern is withheld. The sites in view are the Kinback factory on South Main street, and the Crago building on River street. The enterprise is said to be one of the most desirable yet negotiated for.

The Latest Novelty.

What is perhaps the latest and really only genuine novelty of the season is offered by the management of the Academy next week in the Little Irene Myers company. Little Irene, the youthful aspirant for stellar bonors, although hardly past ten years of age, is pronounced to be, beyond doubt, the most talentes child either upon the American or European stage. Her professional career began at the age of three and a half years, when she made her debut at Keith's theater, Philadelphia, appearing in conjunction with her father in a characterization of Charles E. Harris' famous song, "There'll Come a Time." Quite unlike the average stage child, her work does not appear automatic, but is natural and unaffected, betraying a talent far in excess of
