Little Irene Myers.

If the many flattering comments of the press of other cities are any criterion, there is surely rare treat in store for the patrons of the Acad my next week, when that inimitable child actress and singer, Little Irene Myers, and her big company of dramatic and specialty talent will hold forth. The company is said to be one of excellnece, comprising many artists who have been see: or the local stage with high proced standard attractions. Little Irene scarcely reittle mite of feminimity, and to know her is to ove and admire her.

During her engagement here next week she will se seen in a number of new characterizations many of which are said to even surpass he James E. Watkins; doxology; benewill be given Monday evening, Little Irene appaering as Cissy Denver.

Time has wrought many changes in many things during the past generation, and in all sorts of business we find the most radical changes as well as in the people themselves. Of course, the theatrical world has revolved as rapidly as any, and what would be called great shows in the early days would be very mediocre now, Poor Shakespeare seems to be forgotten in the busy whire, and his plays are seldom seen these days, which fact is sad to relate.

Comedy, music, farce and burlesque are in the van, and the buriesque seems to have the call. What is the reason? Simply, they cater to the popular taste. To sum it all up, tragedy is dead, drama in some instances great, comedy, immense, but burlesque sumply heads the list. The premier in burlesque, the famous Rentz-Santley company, is announced for a return date at the Gaiety, beginning with matinee Easter

Mantell Coming.

Robert B. Mantell, the eminent actor, will be at the Lyceum Tuesday night, presenting for the first time in this city "The Dagger and the Cross," a new play in five acts, by W. A. Tredramatized from Joseph Hatton's famous novel of the same name. M. W. Hanley claims to present not only a splendid scenic and costume production, but also the strongest array of companion players that have ever appeared in support of this fine actor and consequently a splendid performance may be expected. The character of Roubillace the Italian arest of the period of 1664, affords Mr. Mantell, it is said, the best opportunity he has effer had to display his powers as a romantic actor, and as scenery and costumes count for much these days in a play's success, there will be a lavish display of these in the present in

De Angelis Wednesday Night.

It is a fact that Jefferson De Angelia, the star comadian who will appear at the Lyccum next Wednesday night is "next door" to a Corican nobleman. "Scarcely any ene who does not know me pronounces my name correctly and almost all think its French, though it is far from it," the actor is quoted in saying. In explana-tion he stated that originally his was a Greek family and that the rame was then Di Angelos. "Ore of my early projenitors, however, moved to Italy, and achieved the title of Conte, with estates in Corsica. Under the king-hip of Je-rome Bonaparte, whose anger had been incurred in some political way, my great-grand-futher, for it was he, or he was it-fled to this country.
