Our townspeople were somewhat shocked Sunday noon to learn of the sudden demise of Henry Newcomb, one of our old and respected residents. He had been ill for the past few weeks with dropsy, but was not considered dangerously so till Friday. Sunday he was out walking around the yard, and about noon his wife missed him, and went in an outhouse, where she found him dead. He was a life long resident of this place, and for many years Wednesday evening. he conducted a cabinet shop and un-dertaking business, after which he associated himself with the Delaware, Lackswanna and Western company as mechanic, where he was a faithful employe up to a few years ago, when old age and falling health compelled him to retire. He was one of the oldest members of Red Jacket lodge, No. 524, I. O. O. F., and a member of Factoryville encampment, No. 246, L. O. with the help of a crowbar, hamme and a little powder, had undertook an investigation. The lock on the outer door was pried off, and the knob of the vault door broken. Through the open-ing made in the vault door, by knocking off the knob, powder was poured and the lock blown off, and incidentshattered. The thieves went through the vault looking for valuables, but the extent of their findings was a ten cent plece in the top drawer, and this they took. As far as Mr. Platt could tell today, nothing else was disturbed Several people around the court house heard the explosion, but paid no attention to it, and the thieves and the ten cent piece got away in safety.
